Shimon Tells Of 'Taps,' but Refuses Any Data on Talks

Discrepancies in Officer's Testimony At Closed Hearing Noted by Pepper

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon of the Metropolitan Police yesterday began telling Senators about his numerous wire tappings but firmly refused to tell anything he heard.

Shimon's story was relayed to reporters by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) in a press conference after Shimon testified in a closed hearing of the Pepper committee. Shimon was there three hours, with his attorney, Robert E. Lynch.

Pepper said there were gross discrepancies between Shimon's testimony and that of previous witnesses in the probe of the lieutenant's wire-tapping activities.

The closed-door quiz is to resume next week, probably 11 a. m. Tuesday.

A major feature of Shimon's testimony was that he tapped wires in 1947 to investigate a man shadowing Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee. Brewster has said he paid Shimon $100 to $125 for expenses for this work. Shimon's account as reported by Pepper pictured the lieutenant and his aides as trailing the shadow to suites used by Howard Hughes' associates while the millionaire plane maker's war contracts were being probed by the Brewster committee. The wire-tapping was done on hotel phones of Hughes' aides.

But the weight of Shimon's testimony, according to Pepper, was to disclaim any interest in information about the Senate inquiry of 1947 and to picture his work as being all done for the purpose of investigating the "shadow." Pepper said Shimon named the man he was investigating for Brewster as Abner (Chick) Lappin. The latter is reported to be in Mexico City; he was said to have gone there after testifying to the Federal Grand Jury probing wire tapping here.

Pepper said Shimon denied having tapped the wires of the late Senator Josiah Bailey (D., N. C.), but told of tapping wires to track down a fugitive for the Miami police. The fugitive was described as a Cuban sugar swindler.

Denies Bryant's Testimony

Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel told the press conference Shimon flatly denied testimony by a former aide, Pct. Det. James G. Bryant, to the effect that Shimon told Bryant the wire tapping of Hughes' phones was for the Brewster Committee and that U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay was aware of what was being done.

Shimon, in talking to reporters before the hearing, also confirmed that he bought three new cars in 1948, but said they all went back to the firm he bought them from. He said they were not what he wanted. The purchases were listed in information supplied to the 1948 House Investigating Committee in connection with its probe

George Sees 6 to 8 Billion More in Taxes

Senator Predicts Further Increase in Profit Levy Next Year

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A six-to-eight-billion-dollar further increase in taxes next year, collected chiefly from corporate excess profits, was predicted yesterday by Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee.

George said he felt confident the additional amount, on top of the five-billion-dollar "interim" increase now being considered, will be needed to help balance the swollen war budget.

The Georgian estimated about five billion dollars of the second installment increase will come from excess profits taxation. Though corporations will bear the brunt of this tax, he said it ought to be applied as well to some individuals in the "profiteer" class.

The balance would be picked up from plugging more loopholes and "other sources," he added.

Wider Excise Taxes Seen

One well-informed Congressional tax source indicated the taxing committees may resort to a general broadening of present excise taxes, instead of a sales tax, to collect any large balance needed in 1951 after the excess profits tax.

George predicted that ordinary corporation and individual income, taxed nearly five billion dollars additional in the Administration's "interim" bill, won't be subjected to next year's second installment tax.

He said the pending emergency rates, slated to cut deeper into individual pockets in October and retroactive for half a year on corporations, go as high as he thinks Congress is likely to boost them in the immediate future.

The chief of the Senate tax-making unit disclosed his format for a second tax bill as staff experts were readying the Administration's first increase for Senate consideration next Wednesday.

The interim measure about to be passed increases individual income taxes about three billion dollars to nearly World War II peaks. The average individual tax increase will be about 20 percent for those in the lower and middle income tax brackets.

The pending bill taxes corporations an addition 1.5 billion next year by increasing the top rate from 38 percent to 45 percent. The top rate would rise only to 42 percent on this year's corporate earnings.

Byrd Urges 3-5 Million GIs in Europe

70 AF Groups, Radar Screen and UMT Advised In Legion Talk

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The only way to prevent Russia marching over Europe is for the United States to keep three to five million American soldiers there, Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) said yesterday. He described the Korean crisis as 'the most perilous situation in the history of our Republic."

The economy-minded senior Senator from Virginia said he would back Truman to the hilt in spending for national defense. And he advocated these defense measures:

1. A radar screen around the Nation's continental borders, estimated to cost between seven and eight billion dollars.

2. A 70-group Air Force as an "essential security measure."

3. Universal military training.

Byrd and Truman

In his forthright statement to the American Legion's Virginia convention in Alexandria, Byrd declared:

"I have differed with Mr. Truman. He says there are too many Byrds in the Senate, and he may be right.

"But when it comes to the prosecution of this war, I will follow every reasonable and proper request he makes of the Congress of the United States. I will not permit our differences on the domestic situation to influence me a bit."

Going a step further, Byrd asked, "If we are going to fight communism, why don't we fight it at home."

"Why all this tender solicitude for Communists in this country when they are trying to destroy us? And they may succeed in doing it."

Byrd deplored the United States policy of fighting what he called "sideline wars."

He said that because of the situation in China "we may be in a position of fighting a nation (Communist China) that has been recognized by the United Nations." Such a war would last a "long, long time."

Would Get Us "Nowhere"

"Suppose we conquer Communist China and Communist Korea," said the Virginian. "How far have we gone in settling the situation that confronts us? Nowhere at all."

"If Russia starts war on us, we would evacuate Korea immediately. It has no military value. We would only have weakened ourselves immeasurably."

In support of his stand on defense spending, Byrd said he has been advocating economy in Washington because "fiscal solvency is

Two Washington area men were killed yesterday in the crash of an Air Force plane in a tobacco patch near Andrews Air Force Base. They were the pilot and the crew chief of the craft.

The victims were Col. Raymond F. Nicholson, 46, who lived at 1921 North Utah st., Arlington, Va., and T/Sergt. Donald Hopfer, 34, of 1101st Maintenance Squadron at Bolling Air Base.

The only other occupant of the plane, Pfc. Robert F. Lessl, 21, was in serious condition at Andrews Station Hospital. He had been hitchhiking to Chicago.

The colonel, who was piloting the plane, and Sergeant Hopfer were apparently trapped in great flames that instantly enveloped the aircraft, a C-45 Beechcraft.

Lessl kicked open a door and extinguished his flaming clothes by rolling in the dirt.

Colonel Nicholson is survived by his wife, Maxine, and two children, Joyce, 16, who now lives in Chicago, Ill., and Patricia, 6. Colonel Nicholoson served one year during World War II.

The colonel was on a two-week mobilization assignment with the Civil Aeronautics Administration officers reported.

Sergt. Hopfer, whose home was in Midland, Mich., had been stationed at Bolling Base four years, Air Force officers said.

Pfc. Lessl, who is expected to live, is attached to the 84th Airborne Division and is stationed in Madison, Wis. His home is in Milwaukee.

The plane crashed 100 yards back of the house of Charles Biggs at 7240 Brinkley rd. It apparently narrowly missed the house, for a six-feet section of wingtip lodged in a tree 25 yards away.

The crash occurred at 4:33 p. m., six minutes after the plane had taken off from Bolling Air Force Base bound for Norfolk, Va., and Chicago on a training flight.

The only survivor said that soon after the take-off one of the two engines caught fire and the pilot headed for Andrews in an attempt to make an emergency landing. The crash occurred one mile west of the field.

Mrs. Biggs said she was preparing dinner when she heard "a sound like a firecracker" and from her door saw the plane burning fiercely.

Truman Says Controls Plan Is Imperilled

Asks Congress Not To Make Hodgepodge Of Home Front Curbs

President Truman bluntly warned Congress yesterday it is on the verge of making a "tragic" hodgepodge of the economic controls program he requested to gear the home front for the Korean war emergency.

He lodged his sharply worded protest in a letter to Vice President Alben Barkley. It was read to the Senate by a clerk as the chamber neared the end of its lengthy debate on the House-passed legislation.

Mr. Truman complained that the powers he originally asked—to control credit, curb commodity speculation and channel scarce materials into war production — are being "whittled down."

Furthermore, he said, Congress threatens to throw a "host" of restrictions around the standby wage-price-rationing powers which he did not ask, but which the House and Senate insist on giving him anyway.

Mr. Truman said the outcome may be to put an "unworkable law on the books." And that, he said, would be "tragic" for the Nation in the current crisis.

The Chief Executive particularly appealed for defeat of numerous "special purpose" amendments to the price control provisions of the bill. They are aimed at assuming "reasonable profits" to meat processors and to protecting other producers under any ceilings that may be imposed.

A total of 52 amendments—all restrictive in nature—have been introduced in the Senate. Voting on the amendments and eventually on the bill itself is scheduled to get under way Monday.

FBI Seizes Ex-D. C. Man As Red Spy

Held in $100,000 At Mexican Border For Passing Secrets To Russian Ring

Laredo, Tex., Aug. 18 (AP). Morton Sobell, a former Washington, D. C., radar expert who fled to Mexico when the FBI began nabbing suspects in the Klaus Fuchs spy ring, was arrested here today. He is charged with passing defense secrets to Russia.

The arrest apparently took place in a predawn rendezvous between Mexican and United States officers along the border. The FBI surrounded the arrest with extraordinary secrecy. Agents would not say where, when or how Sobell was arrested.

[Sobell worked as an electrical engineer at the Navy Bureau of Ordnance in Washington, from January, 1939, to September, 1941, when he resigned to attend the University of Michigan. He lived here part of that time in an apartment at 2225 N st. nw., and at 4925 7th st. nw.

[While in Washington, he met and later married the former Mrs. Helen Levitov Guerwitz, identified at the Judith Coplon espionage trial as onetime membership secretary of the D. C. Communist Party. Her mother and brother live at 2135 Lee Highway, Arlington.]

Sobell was booked in the Webb County jail here at 4:45 a. m. (CST). Four FBI agents brought him in. He had not shaved for days and his hair was awry. At his hearing before United States Commissioner Frank Y. Hill, he wore a dark green sports shirt and brown trousers.

'No Rich Uncle'

The stocky 33-year-old electrical engineer made no plea. He waived removal proceedings and indicated he wanted to be returned to New York, his home, as soon as possible.

Hill set bond at $100,000. Sobell commented dourly he "had no rich uncle" to post his bail. It may be

Assassins Kill Communist Chief In Belgium

Seraing, Belgium (Saturday) Aug. 19 (U.P.).—Belgian Communist Party President Julien Lahaut, 65, was shot and killed here Friday night by a mysterious assassin who fired four bullets into him as he stood in the doorway of his suburban home.

The assassin escaped with an accomplice in a fast French-make car waiting with its engine running.

Lahaut, who was one of the leaders of recent violent demonstrations against King Leopold III, had been president of the party for five years and was a member of the Chamber of Deputies.

Police said the French-made Citroen car pulled up before Lahaut's home in this industrial suburb of Liege at 9:15 p. m. One man walked to the door while the second remained in the car and kept the engine running.

Lahaut, in his shortsleeves, answered the doorbell. The assassin pumped four shots into the Communist leader, police said. One bullet went through his head and three through his body.

Bedell Smith Heads Central Intelligence

Former Ambassador To Russia Chosen As Agency Director

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former Ambassador to Russia, has been chosen by President Truman to be director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said late yesterday that the appointment would come at the end of September. He emphasized that the selection of Gen. Smith does not indicate any dissatisfaction with the work of Rear Admiral R. H. Hillenkoetter, present director of CIA. He said that Hillenkoetter had been given command of a cruiser division.

The Central Intelligence Agency, which has its headquarters at 2430 E st. nw., was set up under a presidential directive in 1946 for the purpose of pooling foreign intelligence gathered by various Federal agencies. It has come in for much criticism, especially on Capitol Hill.

General Smith, familiarly known as "Beedle," is now commander of the First Army, with headquarters at Governor's Island, N. Y. A long-time sufferer from gastric ulcers, he came to Washington last spring for convalescent care and a check-up at Walter Reed Hospital.

He earned the unofficial title of "general manager" of World War II when, as chief of staff to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, he handled the multitude of details involved in planning the invasion of fortress Europe.

President Truman named General Smith as Ambassador to the Soviet Union early in 1946 and kept him in Moscow until last year. The soldier-diplomat recounted his experiences in a book, "My Three Years in Moscow," which was published in January.

He told of being shielded from contacts with Russians, of being shadowed everywhere by the police, but said that, nevertheless, Soviet diplomatic tactics were not always a mystery.

"Much as we were deliberately isolated from original sources of information in the Soviet Union," he wrote, "it is inevitable that when one lives there long enough to be thoroughly steeped in Russian history, Stalinist ideology and Communist double-talk, he develops a fairly accurate 'sixth sense' for what the Kremlin is going to do, and why."

His "sixth sense" told him that there would be no change of heart in the Kremlin, no understanding

Changnyong Battle Erases All But One Pocket of Troops East of Naktong

BULLETIN

Eighth Army Headquarters (Saturday), Aug. 19 (U.P.).—A South Korean spokesman said today the Thirteenth South Korean Regiment on the right flank north of Taegu had killed 1200 Communists and captured 1000 during the past 24 hours.

Tokyo (Saturday) Aug. 19 (AP). — Toughening American and South Korean forces have hurled back two Red smashes at Taegu, gained ground in the north and held firm elsewhere in a dramatic turn for the better all along the Korean warfront.

Dawn broke on what many had feared would be Black Friday for the defenders. Instead, by nightfall:

Two South Korean divisions with the American Twenty-seventh Regiment blocked thrusts by 30,000 North Koreans 12 miles north of the key forward base of Taegu and won back half or all of the 3 miles they had lost Thursday.

This was the scene of the "present main enemy effort," General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said in a summary early today.

It was not clear whether the gains made Friday by South Korean forces had included the recapture of Kumwha, the highway town 12 miles north of Taegu. Kumwha fell to the Reds Thursday.

At Eighth Army headquarters, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported three North Korean divisions with at least 20 tanks had been identified in the Communist buildup around Kumwha. They were named the First, Third and Thirteenth.

Enemy Reeling in Bulge

The United States Marine First Brigade and the Army Twenty-fourth Infantry Division simultaneously gave what the Twenty-fourth commanding general called "a hell of a licking" to the North Korean Fourth Division in its 12,000-man bridgehead east of the Naktong River near Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

The Marines and the Twenty-fourth Division made a 3-mile dent in the Changnyong bulge, virtually halving it, in 36 hours of ferocious fighting.

Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth reported from the sector that the Reds made no counterattacks during last night; that the Americans were prepared for mopping up operations today; that the entire bridgehead of 12,

Bomber Crew Puts Seoul City Sue Out of Business

Details of the silencing of "Seoul City Sue" by an American bomber crew one night this week were related in a broadcast from Tokyo last night.

Major Wes McPheron reported that Lieut. Bud Gallagher of Kerhonkson, N. Y., was annoyed by propaganda poured out in English by a feminine voice from the radio station at Communist-held Seoul.

With the aid of his navigator, Lieut. Ted Keesler, of Grants Pass, Ore., and his gunner, Sgt. Oscar Berg, of Muscatine, Iowa, Gallagher found the transmitter tower of "Sue's station" outside Seoul and damaged it enough to put her off the air.

McPheron said that "Seoul City Sue" will never make the Hooper ratings, even if she gets back on the air. He said there is no music on her program, just propaganda.

Farouk Will Wed Beauty, 16; She's Rumored Having a Baby

Deauville, France, Aug. 18 (AP).—King Farouk I will marry Narriman Sadek, 16-year-old Egyptian beauty, in Egypt next spring, one of the visiting monarch's aides said tonight.

Karim Thabet Pasha, press counselor, told newsmen there is no question of a marriage ceremony in France. He explained the king would be married only in Egypt.

There had been much speculation that the 30-year-old monarch, who is on a 10-day vacation here, and Miss Sadek might wed at this resort city.

The king met Miss Sadek in Cairo last November. Reliable sources outside Egypt's strict censorship reported that the girl's engagement to Mohammed Zaki Hashem, 27, a former United Nations economist, had been broken at the order of the King.

Since the meeting of the King and Miss Sadek, many rumors have swirled about them, only to be met with stony silence in court circles. The girl was last seen at St. Moritz, Switzerland, two days ago.

A hotel apartment which has been reserved "in the name of the King" was still vacant today. Members of the royal entourage, asked if Miss Sadek would occupy it, said only: "We know nothing about that."

Miss Sadek left Cairo last spring. Some reports said large sums of money from the royal account have been transferred to Italy, Switzerland and France for her use.

Other reports said the Egyptian beauty had gone to Rome to have a baby by the King. According to these reports, Farouk would announce their marriage if the baby were a boy. However, if the baby were a girl, it was expected Miss Sadek would drop out of his life.

Farouk dissolved his first marriage because his queen bore only daughters and not a boy who could succeed to the throne.

Japan Lines Up With the West In Korean and World Struggle

Tokyo (Saturday) Aug. 19 (AP).—The Japanese government today aligned itself with the United Nations' effort in Korea and the Western democracies in the world ideological struggle.

In a "white paper," the government said "to cooperate with the democracies and assist in strengthening their unity should be considered as nothing less than a measure for our own self defense."

The paper, an exhaustive review of the Korean situation, did not specifically state how Japan proposed to assist. It appeared in some respects to be an invitation for a United Nations request to do so.

The statement urged all Japanese to help prevent acts of sabotage. It specifically labelled Japan's past leftist-led "political demonstrations, strikes and other incidents" as part of the world-wide Communist struggle.

"It certainly would not be wise to leave the control of such acts only to the police. It is the duty of every one of us to do our part and thereby preserve our national security," the paper added.

It told the Japanese that "there is no room for 'non-involvement' or 'neutrality'"—two viewpoints which have already been proclaimed loudly here by an influential minority.

"We Japanese, who already are in the field of battle, cannot afford to take an ambiguous stand, no

Organized Crime Taking Over Many Businesses, Probers Say

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee opened a couple of drawers in its now-bulging files yesterday to tell Congress in an interim report some things it has discovered.

The 10,000-word report drew some general conclusions from detailed hearings on Florida gambling plus limited information from elsewhere, reported the "nucleus" of a master criminal file has been organized, declared it has a lot of data about gangsters muscling into legitimate businesses and said it is about to ask for another appropriation.

Along with the report, a careful, serious job reflecting some excellent staff work to date, came a statement from one committee member, Senator Wiley (R., Wis.).

Wiley, busy running for re-election, has failed to attend any of the committee's grueling out-of-town hearings. But yesterday he reported "rumors" that there are tie-ups between "national politicians—yes, some few representatives and senators" and "individuals representing illegitimate pursuits."

But as in the case some months ago when Wiley spoke darkly of Democratic "pressure" on the crime committee, the senator again named no names. He just said he

Taegu's Population Streams From City

By Hal Boyle

Taegu, Korea, Aug. 18 (AP).—Thousands of panic-stricken men, women and children streamed out of Taegu today to the thunder of nearby battle.

Carrying what belongings they could bear, the frightened people reluctantly left their humble tile-roofed homes under defense orders. They cloged the roads leading southeast out of the city.

(In Tokyo it was announced that the United Nations unified command was establishing a U. N. relief organization to care for 1,500,000 South Korean refugees.)

Four Killed by Shelfire

Before dawn Friday six enemy shells exploded inside Taegu. It was the first time enemy fire had hit the city. At least four persons were killed. A locomotive tender in a railyard was struck.

By daylight thousands of refugees were jamming the dusty streets. The Republic government ordered all nonessential civilians to leave.

President Syngman Rhee and United States Ambassador John J. Muccio soon departed, and other officials were leaving this provisional captial to set up offices elsewhere.

The evacuation order was issued to clear the city for defense and as a safety measure to avoid a last-minute rush such as occurred when Seoul fell June 28, four days after the Red invasion.

Jammed With Refugees

Taegu is normally a city of some 350,000 but refugees had increased the population to something more like 700,000 or 800,000. Today it was dwindling fast.

Storekeepers boarded their shops against looters. Families put utensils, food and bedding on their shoulders and tearfully joined the exodus.

The panic in the threatened city lasted until 1 p. m. Friday. Then the hot sun and the weariness slowed the pace. Many who had wandered about aimlessly went back to their homes.

22-Day Project

New Rocket Turned Out In a Hurry

The Navy reported yesterday that its new 6½-inch aerial rocket, which carries a "shaped charge" designed to penetrate heavy armor, was developed and shipped to Korea in 22 days.

A Navy spokesman told reporters that Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of Naval Operations, directed the Navy's Ordnance Bureau on July 6 to develop the rocket as quickly as possible.

Successful development of the weapon was reported a week later. On July 29, the Naval Ordnance test station at Inyokern, Calif., shipped the first batch to the western Pacific.

The Navy spokesman said the rocket employs designs and principles that Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, has used in his "shaped charge."

He said the first of the new rockets to reach the Far East were delivered to the Air Force, which used them "very effectively."

The rocket is designed to put tanks and other armored weapons out of action. The explosive charge is shaped so as to focus its effect. Similar "shaped charges" used by the Army are reported able to penetrate more than 10 inches of armor. A "shaped charge" is used in the Army's new 3½-inch bazooka.

Gen. Collins, Adm. Sherman Fly to Tokyo

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, will fly to Tokyo today for Korean war strategy talks with Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

It will be the second time since the outbreak of the war that members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff have visited the Far East to find out what MacArthur needs for victory.

Collins and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Chief of Staff, flew to Tokyo July 10 and returned July 15.

An Air Force spokesman said Vandenberg is not going this time because his vice chief of staff, Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, has just returned from a similar mission to Japan.

Defense Department officials said it has not been decided how long Sherman and Collins will remain or whether they will go to Korea.

"They are making the trip to determine the needs of their forces and to see for themselves what's going on," a spokesman said.

'U. N. Police Reporter' War Newsman's Idea

Tokyo, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Correspondents covering the Korean war met today to discuss the possibility of wearing identifying shoulder patches such as they had in World War II.

Bill Downs of Columbia Broadcasting System had the most popular suggestion.

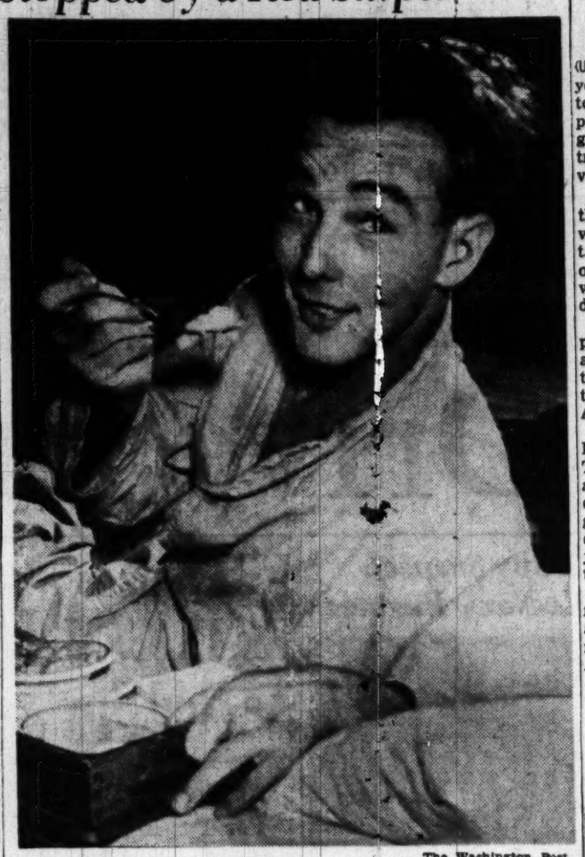
Stopped by a Red Sniper



The Washington Post

CASUALTY—Pvt. George S. Gray, jr., of Accokeek, Md., has his chow at Walter Reed Hospital. The "ammo" bearer is in the hospital with leg wounds inflicted by a North Korean machine gunner just 75 days after his outfit sailed from Seattle

"We were scared all the time in Korea," said battle-wounded Pvt. George S. Gray, jr., of Accokeek, Md., at Walter Reed General Hospital yesterday.

"But what really hurt was seeing your buddies killed."

Gray, 21, handsome with brown hair and eyes, "got his" at 2:30 p. m., July 27, while serving with the Twenty-fifth Division as an "ammo" bearer for a bazooka team.

Just where in Korea a hidden machine gunner's bullet him just below the left knee he doesn't know. "Even if I could think of the name of the place I couldn't spell it. Honest."

It is all a little hazy to him, even as to whether they were in the front lines a week or 10 days without relief.

Gray's team was thirsty, so he went to get some water. On his way back with it, a machine gunner who had wounded four other GIs that morning, a sniper Gray never saw, shot him.

Gray, who was wounded two days before the end of his first year in the Army, lay in a hole for about an hour before crawling 250 yards to a litter.

They carried him back five miles to an aid station. From there it was a journey by jeep, ambulance, train and plane to 118 Station Hospital in Japan, and later to Tokyo General Hospital.

He arrived in San Francisco by plane last Tuesday, 75 days after his outfit had sailed from Seattle, and arrived at Walter Reed on Thursday.

Morale?

"Morale was good in Korea," said Gray. "It is the only thing that keeps the GIs going. Everybody figured there was a job to be done, and nobody doubted that we would drive the Reds back."

Final Stage of Bulge Battle Is Rout for Panicky Reds

By Robert C. Miller

In the Naktong Bulge, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The battle of the Changnyong bulge turned into a slaughter tonight, as North Koreans fled in panic across the Naktong River, giving U. S. Marines and infantrymen their biggest and fastest victory of the war.

The First Marine Brigade and the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, aided by merciless air attacks, drove shattered remnants of the North Korean Fourth Division across the river under a deadly shower of flame and steel.

The Communists were meted punishment beyond human endurance. When the fighting was over, the battlefield was littered with the bodies of 1000 Communists. American casualties were light.

The battle had lasted two days. It started with an all-out attack Thursday morning by the marines and infantrymen. During the first day, the North Koreans put up a good defense. But they suddenly collapsed when they were subjected again to the full might of the American forces.

The Communists were bombed from the air, shelled with heavy artillery and riddled with automatic weapons and rifle fire by the Americans who drove and drove and drove, never giving a minute's rest.

"They certainly are taking a hell of a licking," said Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commander of the Twenty-fourth Division.

By tonight, all objectives except one small pocket of a ridge had been taken. Only mop-up operations remained in the defeat of the North Koreans. They had spent two weeks driving a 7-mile wedge into American lines 40 miles southwest of Taegu. It took only two days to get them out.

The last North Korean stand was made this afternoon atop a mile and a half long ridge with a 1000-foot slope which had seemed insurmountable to the Yanks yesterday.

At first the ridge was bathed in white phosphorous and high explosive artillery shells. The frantic Communists poured over the hill seeking refuge on the far slope. There the planes caught them, ripping flesh and bone with rockets, 20 millimeter shells and deadly napalm bombs filled with gasoline that fries the land and suffocates the living.

Back over the ridge went the confused North Koreans. Again the ground quaked under artillery and mortar fire as tanks and recoilless guns joined in the firing.

Those who survived the trap plunged almost straight down the slope of the ridge to the river, which curves gracefully in a wide arc.

The slaughter became even greater as the Communists tried to wade and swim the 100-yard stretch. Some tried it alone. Others tried in groups of 20. Several groups of 200 to 300 were seen from the air. For every group that made it, a dozen failed.

Corsairs and F-51s reaped a bloody harvest. They skimmed in at treetop level and sprayed the swimmers with machinegun fire, rockets and bombs.

Had the North Koreans waited until dark, hundreds of men might have escaped. But, as one prisoner related, their officers either were killed or fled and there was only confusion.

Hungry POWs Show Success of Air War

Tokyo, Aug. 18 (AP).—Allied airpower is hitting the North Korean Reds where it hurts—in the stomach.

An intelligence offcer in General MacArthur's headquarters said today that hunger was one reason for a slight increase in North Korean surrenders.

He said that showed the effectiveness of air raids on the supply lines. He had predicted earlier that results would show up in a shortage of food as well as fuel and ammunition in the Communist front lines.

Meanwhile, Allied warplanes were striking enemy targets over widely separated areas of Korea.

Light bombers flying in full force smashed rail supply lines, wrecked bridges and damaged tunnels.

Australian Mustang fighters strafed in the Uisong area, 35 air miles north of Taegu, where Communists were massed for an assault.

They hit a strategic rail tunnel northwest of Waegwan in south central Korea, and strafed Songju, 18 miles west of Taegu. Five villages believed used by the enemy as artillery positions were left burning.

Army and Marines Speed Reserve Calls

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Army and the Marine Corps yesterday stepped up calls for fresh manpower to meet the demands of the Korean crisis.

At the same time the Navy announced it was reactivating naval stations at Midway in the Pacific and in the Caribbean at Trinidad, B.W.I. The Midway base has been inactive since June 6, while that at Trinidad was placed in "reduced status" last May.

The Army revealed it would recall 570 additional captains and lieutenants of the Corps of Engineers reserve to active duty. Of these, 76 captains and 148 lieutenants will be inducted from the Second Army area, which includes the District, Virginia and Maryland.

This move, the Army said, will double the number of Engineer reserve officers called into service and will raise to 8432 the total of company grade officers called to active duty in 16 arms and services. All Engineer reserve officers, the Army added, would be on active duty by October 13, a week later than the October 6 date set for officers of other branches.

These officers will be recalled with or without their consent.

The Army also called for volunteer enlisted women in the inactive or volunteer WAC reserve for a minimum of one year's service. This call, the Army pointed out, applies to all reserve WACs, regardless of their specialties. Previous calls for volunteer WACs had been limited to those skilled in certain specialties.

The Marine Corps announced it would call to active duty all enlisted men with the grade of sergeant and below in its volunteer reserve. In the next few days, the Corps said, it would begin calling to active duty volunteer reserve ground officers of company grade. No officers with pilot ratings are being called now, the Corps added, but said some 300 non-pilot officers with aviation specialties would be called.

Ground reserve officers to be called will have "combat-type specialties" and will be under 31 years old. The Marine Corps said approximately 2300 of these ground officers would be called to active duty by July, 1951.

The Marine Corps also announced it would begin enlisting in its reserves, for immediate active duty "in excess of 30 days" young men between 18 and 32 who do not wish to join the regular Marines. At the same time, the minimum enlistment in the regular Corps was lowered from four years to three.

The commandant of the Corps said no Marine, regular or reserve, under 18 would be ordered into actual combat.

Engineers To Activate District Unit

The 430th Engineer Construction Battalion, first organized District Army unit to be called to active duty in the Korean crisis, will be activated at 7:30 a. m. today at the Engineer Armory, 450 Maine ave. sw.

The battalion, whose commander is Lieut. Col. Oliver E. Deming of 2811 S. Abingdon st., Arlington, will spend the next week being processed and brought up to date on Army regulations, before leaving Washington.

About 80 percent of the enlisted men and 95 per cent of the officers are veterans of World War II, Col. Deming reported.

At Fort Meade, Md., 25 recently recalled Army Reservists, including 10 from the Washington area, are completing plans for a Signal Corps Organized Reserve summer camp, which opens there Sunday.

The 715th Transportation Truck Battalion, District National Guard, which is on active duty and awaiting marching orders at the Guard Armory, will be reviewed at 2 p. m. today. The review, which will include the 171st MP Battalion to which the 715th has been attached, will be before Lieut. Col. Sylvester Blackwell, commander of the 171st.

Meanwhile, recruiters yesterday enlisted 20 men for the Army, six for the Air Force, and six for the Navy.

4 Draft Boards Dig Down for 22-Year-Olds

Four local draft boards have exhausted their lists of registrants 25, 24 and 23 years old and have sent preinduction notices to 22-year-olds, Selective Service officials said yesterday.

The shift into the lower age group is expected to increase the acceptance rate.

Thus far, about 44 percent of those taking the preinduction physical and mental tests have been accepted, figures show. Of 475 reporting from July 24 through August 9, 211 men qualified for Army duty, according to Selective Service figures.

First induction notices will go out about next Friday to District registrants. The first draftees will probably be sworn in on September 6, officials said.

Yesterday, 120 men reported for preinduction tests at the Army-Air Force recruiting station at Arlington Farms. Twenty-six others who failed to report are being investigated by Selective Service to determine if they are delinquents under the draft law.

Chinese Report Russian Planes In Shanghai Area

Taipei, Formosa, Aug. 18 (AP).—A Nationalist China spokesman said today Russian air force planes are flying daily in the Shanghai area of Communist China.

Lieut. Gen. Chang Yi-ting of the Defense Ministry said intelligence reports identified them as belonging to the Soviet Twelfth Wing.

He said unverified reports estimated the wing included possibly 75 fighter planes, 50 light bombers and a smaller number of heavy bombers (medium bombers by American standards).

Chang said other intelligence reports he could fully trust were that three Chinese Communist divisions passed through Mengtzu on their way to Indo-China. Mengtzu is about 50 miles by air fro mIndo-China and twice that distance by road.

Aussie Landing Denied

Tokyo (Saturday), Aug. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Sir Horace Robertson, commander of British Commonwealth occupation forces in Japan, today denied reports that 4000 Australian troops have landed in Korea.

'Speed Records Broken In Moving Reservists

El Toro, Calif., Aug. 18 (AP). The Marines said today that speed records were broken in the dispatch of air reservists to overseas duty from the air station here.

An announcement said members of the Air Reserve were en route overseas within a week after reporting for active duty.

NYHT News Service

The United States announced yesterday it had accepted offers by Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Turkey to send ground troops to Korea to join American forces in fighting under the United Nations banner.

The acceptances were announced by the State Department less than 24 hours after Gen. Douglas MacArthur, as U. N. Commander for South Korea, had appealed to other U. N. members to send such forces without delay.

Turkey, it was announced, will send 4500 troops.

The sizes of the other three forces still have to be worked out, but their offers have been accepted "in principle," Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said.

Australia, he said, will contribute an infantry force built around troops now in Japan; New Zealand will send a "special combat team," and Britain a selfcontained force of unspecified size.

Other sources estimated that the British Empire altogether would contribute about one full combat division.

Discussion of the makeup and use of the Turkish troops already are under way in Ankara and it appeared probable they would be among the first ground forces of other nations to join the American troops.

Thailand and the Philippines had promised such aid, and Defense Department sources said a representative of the former's government was en route to Tokyo to work out with General MacArthur plans for their speedy dispatch to the war front. Thailand has agreed to send 4000 officiers and men and the Philippines 5000.

American officials are particularly pleased by the promise of these two forces, for the presence of Asiatic troops alongside the Americans will contradict Soviet propaganda that the Korean campaign is a "white man's" aggression against Orientals.

Gen. Eddy Takes Over European Command

Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, whose Army Corps blasted a path for Gen. George Patton's drive through France, took over command of the U. S. Army in Europe today.

His first job will be to crystalize plans for defense of Germany from possible aggression from the East, military sources said. The 57-year-old general who replaced retiring Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner told newsmen new arms will be sent here as they are produced in the United States.

Finletter in England

London, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—United States Air Secretary Thomas K. Finletter flew here from the United States today to inspect the British-based American Third Air Division that has been more than tripled in strength since the Korean War.

more than we can flee before the enemy in a real war. It would mean nothing but ultimate destruction of our freedom and peace," it said.

The statement also condemned minority Japanese opposition to the maintenance of allied military bases here as one of the "instruments of the communists."

The paper said Japan has been marked as "a special price" by the Chinese Communist-Soviet treaty of mutual assistance and the Korean conflict means the "Japanese people are standing in the maelstrom of the present conflict."

But "in case of unprovoked aggression against Japan, like the one in Korea, we may rest assured that the Democracies of the world would join in stretching forth a helping hand."

It tried to reassure some jittery Japanese, who remember their own experiences, by saying:

"Atomic warfare, in which the democratic world would be overwhelmingly superior, is likely to be ruled out unless the situation reaches the worst possible stage."

No Men With Horns, However

The Rocket Overloaded, Who Stays on the Moon?

By Sonia Stein

I CAN'T say much for the scenery, but if it's quiet you want and a chance to get away from it all—238,000 miles away—why here's your destination. I mean the moon.

In "Destination Moon," which opened yesterday at the Trans-Lux Theater, four men go to the moon in a rocket ship, powered by atomic energy, and find as bleak and desolate an area as ever I did see. Unless there is uranium up there, I don't think it's worth the trip.

However, like most men, the audience yesterday seemed to think the trip itself was fun. Darned if they didn't. The audience was almost 90 percent male at the opening show, and I suspect it will stay largely that way. "Destination Moon" should appeal to those of a scientific bent but no scientific knowledge, I'd think. The picture shows, in most simplified form, precisely how a rocket to the moon would operate. And it makes no attempt to find anything up there that scientists have not already figured by careful calculating might really be there. Which is to say, silence, craters and fissures. No little men with horns or anything.

The plot is pretty dramatic. A general and a scientist have sunk all their energies into building a rocket for the Government. It explodes, probably as a result of sabotage, they think. So they go to an industrialist, convince him to convince others that private enterprise is what a project like this needs, and that a project like this is needed for strategy, because whichever country gets control of the moon as a rocket takeoff point can control the world.

Under private enterprise, we get action and no sabotage. The Government gets sticky about letting the boys take off, so they take off in haste before they can be stopped.

But, like many journeys begun in haste, it is repented at leisure when the boys find out they can't get back without jettisoning practically everything aboard the ship that isn't welded to the rocket shell. This includes—OK, laugh—their keys, matches and every scrap of paper including the log they kept en route. They still come up 110 pounds too heavy. It seems that in traipsing around the interstellar areas, with a rocket so powerful it will travel 238,000 miles at 7 miles per second, a little matter like 110 pounds can be important. Now what can you think of that, full grown, weighs 110 pounds or better?

There's a choice. There's the general. He's lived most of his life, but he can tell the defense story best if he goes back. There's the young industrialist. He has no family, but he's the boy with plenty of know-how. There's the scientist, who's satisfied to see his work a success, but he's the best one to report on most matters concerning the trip. And then there's the radio and radar man, definitely expendable, but he didn't come on the trip of his own volition so is it fair to leave him stranded on the moon?

Everything resolves itself, to be sure.

The picture has been handled with humor—"I got to get back to earth; Dem Bums is playing tomorrow," or words to that effect. There is a fascinating scene in which one of the travelers floats off into space, when he tries to inspect part of the skin of the rocket and gets his magnetic shoes disengaged from the surface. Since there's no pull of gravity out in space, the poor thing seems destined to float in space until he dies of hunger. But what with one trick and another, he's rescued.

No One to Lure Ladies

The picture seems in every particular to be based on scientific fact, loosely speaking, and yet there is an air of bizzarreness about this picture which may make it unpalatable to genuine scientists. The audience at the first show—standing room only, by the way—ate it up, however.

The producer, George Pal, decided early in the game he'd better stick to unknown players if he wanted the picture to ring true. He needn't have bothered, since the picture doesn't ring true anyway. And while the actors are reasonably competent, there is no dynamic hero there to give the ladies even a faint interest in the picture.

The Technicolor lends something to the film, and it's not a hard way to spend the time. But in the attempt to show how people would move in cumbersome insulated space suits, in an area where there is no gravity pull, the actors move slowly and it does slow the picture down. This is a different kind of picture, however, and it will appeal to some people who are normally extremely indifferent to movies. And it does contain some magnificent photographic effects, including the twinkling stars in the velvet heavens.

"DESTINATION MOON," at the Trans-Lux. A George Pal production. Color by Technicolor. Directed by Irving Pichel. Written for the screen by Rip Van Ronkel, R. A. Heinlein and James O'Hanlon from a novel by Heinlein. Photography by Lionel Lindon.

What a Melon! Officer Agrees And Nabs Suspect

Savage, Md., Aug. 18 (AP).—"I got a good one this time," said the youth as he puffed up to his parked car lugging a big watermelon.

"Yea, that's a pretty one," said a voice from the dark. "Just lay it here on the floor with the others."

"Now," said Maryland State Trooper Jack Davis, "you are under arrest."

Davis identified the watermelon lugger as Kenneth B. Nagel, 20, of Hyattsville, Md., and described the shuttle system used to get the watermelons.

Nagel and five companions found a big truck loaded with watermelons tolling slowly up a hill. Nagel ran ahead on foot, caught up with the truck, and filched a melon, Davis said. His companions drove up, he unloaded his loot, and took off after the truck again, according to the officer.

Trooper Davis said he saw the car turn in a side road to wait for Nagel as the truck neared the top of the hill. He stopped the car and waited for Nagel to arrive with another watermelon.

The five accomplices were identified as Elred A. Fox, 19; Franklin H. Rafter, 19, and Angelo Ingegneri, 20, all of Hyattsville; Robert M. Leamen, 18, of Riverdale, and Robert D. Shepp, 19, of Mount Rainier.

Magistrate J. Edwin Haslup held them in $200 bond for a hearing later on larceny charges.

Widmark an Evil Genius In Ugly Film at Capitol

There is an ugly picture about an ugly man with an ugly character at the Capitol this week. "Night and the City," based on the Gerald Kersh novel about a night club tout who lures affluent strangers to a spot where they can be easily fleeced, is not a pretty business.

And the picture is photographed in as unpretty a fashion as possible. Richard Widmark, who plays Harry Fabian, a man of much imagination for illegal enterprises, has never been photographed to less advantage. Not having read the novel, I cannot say whether Fabian was meant to be a physically unattractive man, but since he is supposed to be attractive to the ladies, it would appear not.

Apart from appearing to be all teeth—none too white and shiny at that—Widmark is a weak-looking guy, dressed in incontrovertibly poor taste. It's a credit to the producer that he let his leading man be so unattractive, but whatever became of the theory that you must be able to find some one good quality in the leading character or else rustle up somebody else for the audience to identify itself with?

In "Night and the City" there is a much-put-upon girl who loves Fabian, who would do for that somebody else, except that her role is so brief. Gene Tierney plays it, and well enough. It's kind of surprise to see her in so little of the picture since she is technically the leading lady. Googie Withers, a hard and calculating creature, actually has the meatier feminine role. She's a nasty one, too, however, being loathsome to her loathsome husband and as crooked as a snaggle tooth. It is she who trains the girls in the club to wheedle or snare customers into buying more liquor and cigarettes. Any stealing the girls do must be on the outside, she explains.

One of the major scenes in the picture involves a wrestling match to the death, between Mike Mazurki and a beaten-up looking character named Stanislaus Zbyszko. This isn't the kind of wrestling you get on television, take my word. Francis L. Sullivan is Googie Withers' monstrous and unpleasant husband, owner of the night club.

These people all crawled out from under a rock, I'm sure, and you have to have a taste for this kind of thing to enjoy the picture. It is magnificently acted by everyone involved, however. We even get a bit of acting out of Miss Tierney.

Widmark is superb, a far cry from the clean-cut young doctor he's playing over at the Playhouse in "Panic in the Streets" these days. This kind of thing could pull the rug out from under him with the bobby soxers, and I think he must have the motives of a real artist to risk it.

The underlying theme of the picture is that Fabian is a man who started to run away from the truant officer as a child and has been running away ever since. There is actually a long scene of running, which culminates in the dead end that Fabian was so clearly headed for. He makes one last stab at doing a kindness to his girl before the end, and typically Fabian, even this has a sordid touch to it.

There is meant to be some pity for Fabian. Early in the film a sculptor describes him as an artist who has no medium and who is consequently frustrated and dangerous. And that may be. But the Fabian shown doesn't arouse much sympathy. A man who will pit father against son to make a few dirty quid, is hard to take.

The film, for reasons of moral censorship and length had to deviate from the novel I understand, and that may be part of the problem here. It certainly would account for the almost incidental nature of Fabian's girl

There's much to admire in this picture, dramatically if not ethically, and it is a picture not to be overlooked by lovers of strong drama. But for the kiddies, positively not.

The whole film was produced in London and a murky, damp underworld it shows. Jules Dassin directed the picture for Samuel G. Engel and 20th-Century Fox.

On stage at the Capitol are a group of experts in their fields. Felix Knight, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera, comes up with about what you'd expect: A stunning voice and a poor theater act. However, he has imported a delightful French song for us called "Fiesta Bohemian" as I got it. And the audience seems to love him.

Roger-Ray is preceded on stage by a xylophone about which he aptly remarks, "as soon as you see this instrument rolled on the stage you hate me." But all hate is rapidly dispelled, because Ray uses the xylophone to lean on, primarily, and is actually a very adept comedian.

The other acts include Lathrop and Lee, a tap dancing pair. Not knowing who's who in that billing, I hesitate to say which of them has the elegant figure. But one of them certainly does.

Peggy Taylor, an adagio dancer of suitable sang froid and rubber ligaments, has Lawlor and Clark as low men on the totem pole. They also do a good job, and this kind of thing is always suspenseful to watch.

Final Approval Of EPU Awaits U. S. Funds

Paris, Aug. 18. (AP).—The Marshall plan nations tonight approved a new system to handle trade with each other, but delayed final signatures until the United States donates the money for it.

Deputies of the 18-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC) recommended each of the governments sign the European Payments Union (EPU). This is a formality only, for actual approval of the plan was given July 7 by Cabinet Ministers of the member nations meeting as the OEEC Ministerial Council.

Marshall plan leaders in Washington are expected to ask congress to assign part of the marshall Plan's 1951 budget to the OEEC to underwrite the EPU.

An OEEC source said the actual amount needed is unknown, but "one figure mentioned" was around 350 million dollars.

The EPU will work as a clearing house for West European nations in their trade with each other. In effect, a nation buying goods from a neighbor will pay money for the goods into the EPU, and the neighbor will draw out money. This system will eliminate slow, tedious systems of direct dealings between individual countries and the consequent currency snarls.

French Employers Held Breeding Communism

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

An American trade union delegation has returned from France with a sharp criticism of "the reactionary attitude of French employers."

The unionists warned of "communism thriving by default" on the economic hardships of French workers. They asked for the Economic Cooperation Administration to take a "sharp change of emphasis" and try to promote internal reforms in French industry and government.

The delegation was comprised of two CIO and two AFL union officers. All are from organiations that have successfully prevented or cleaned out Communist-domination in their own houses.

A summary of their views is contained today in the CIO News. Three of the group were sent to France by the ECA to look at conditions in a score of major textile centers. A fourth headed a CIO auto workers' delegation to auto and plane plants in France, Germany and Italy.

Call Labor Laws Backward

The CIO News quoted the group as voicing "frank alarm about the economic hardship endured by French workers' families, the reactionary attitude of French employers, and the failure of the French government to improve 'backward' labor legislation."

The visitors said they believed the ECA had necessarily devoted itself during its first two years to the job of getting food supplies, industrial raw materials and production machinery to France.

"But if democratic morale among French workers is to be strengthened, ECA must now buckle down to the job of seeing that those workers get the benefit of new equipment and machinery," the group reported.

William Belanger, a vice-president of the CIO Textile Workers Union, said that while French prices had risen steadily, wages had been held down.

The French worker, he said, wants to see positive results in increased wages to give him an adequate standard of living. He "has no faith in anything right now—and we could understand it," Belanger said.

High Profit, Low Output

Harold Gibbons, of the AFL Teamsters of St. Louis, said that "Communism is thriving by default in France. French employers have contributed greatly to the manufacture of Communism in the country. French industry is highly cartelized, and it has a high-profit, low output outlook."

The group said French workers, with "painfully low living standards" have developed poor morale and that the big, aggressive French Communist Party is capitalizing on distress and low spirits.

John Livingston, vice president of the auto workers union, said that unles something was done to improve living conditions in the three countries he visited, there was danger that all the fruits of the Marshall Plan would be undone. He said if conditions stagnate or get worse, he feared an "upheaval," with Stalin winning the game.

Livingston reported industries benefitting by Marshall Plan funds are making large profits, but the workers are not sharing in the prosperity.

Sobell Background Here a Murky One

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Backtracking the Washington life of Morton Sobell, jailed as a Russian spy, yesterday led reporters to many small curtains.

He lived and worked here, and wed a former Arlington, Va., girl. Yet those who knew him at all could scarcely recall him; those who may have known him well were tight-lipped.

Sobell married Mrs. Helen Levitov Gurewitz, who last year was named by the FBI as membership secretary of the District of Columbia Communist Party.

She was so identified in District Court at the Judith Coplon espionage trial, in June, 1949. And her first husband, Clarence D. (Casey) Gurewitz, was named in the same Government document as "a very active member of the Communist Party, District of Columbia, and has been so for 12 years."

Mrs. Sobell's relatives in Arlington were reluctant to talk. A brother said she was estranged from the family "by her part in Communist things."

Don't Talk About Her

"We don't talk about Helen," said her brother, David Levitov, of 2135 Lee Highway, Arlington. "She probably knew what he (Sobell) was doing."

At the Gurewitz home, at 1619 R st. nw., a woman told questioners: "I'm sorry, we have no information. Sorry. Sorry. Sorry."

Sobell, the FBI disclosed, was born in New York City on April 11, 1917. His parents, now naturalized United States citizens, were born in Russia. His father now works as a pharmacist in a New York drug store.

In 1938, the son was graduated from the City College of New York with a bachelor of electrical engineering degree. He came here to the Navy Bureau of Ordnance the following January.

Vague Memories

A few employes who worked there then "vaguely" recalled the stocky, apparently unaggressive Sobell.

"He wasn't outstanding, as I recall," one employee said.

"Just an average worker, an average engineer," said another. "He didn't stand out at all."

While in Washington, Sobell lived first at 4925 7th st. nw., and later in an apartment at 2225 N st. nw., which he apparently shared with a man identified by rent receipts as "Max Elitcher."

When Sobell left the bureau, in 1941, for the University of Michigan, he apparently took with him the memory of Helen Levitov Gurewitz. For he returned to marry her on March 10, 1945. He took leave for the wedding while employed in the General Electric Co., at Schenectady, N. Y.

Five Years at GE

Sobell joined GE after receiving his master's degree in electrical engineering at the University of Michigan. He worked there from June 15, 1942, until June 13, 1947, the period in which he is charged with conspiring with others to send national defense information to Soviet Russia.

He left GE to accept employment in mid-1947 with the Reeves Instrument Co. of New York and was employed by that firm until he failed to appear for work, on last June 16, the day another member of the alleged spy ring was arrested.

Wire services last night reported locating Mrs. Sobell and her two children in Laredo, Texas. One child was identified as Sydney Gurewitz, about 9, a son of her first marriage; the other, Mark Sobell, 15-month-old son of her present marriage.

Mrs. Sobell, the wires indicated, was as noncommittal as her Washington relatives and her husband's friends.

Man Fined in Crash That Injured Officer

Edward M. Brooks, 19, of East Falls Church, was fined $50 and costs yesterday on a reckless driving charge in Arlington County Court.

Brooks, according to police, was the driver of a car that ran through a stop sign at 60 miles an hour early on the morning of August 13, and collided with a Park Police car. Police Sergt. Andrew J. Bickford, 47, of 2003 Commonwealth ave., Alexandria, was injured in the crash.

some time before papers are signed for his removal to New York.

Sobell was the eighth American rounded up and charged with passing defense secrets to Russia. Allegedly the key men were Dr. Klaus Fuchs, now serving a 14-year prison term in Britain for atomic spying, and Harry Gold, Philadelphia chemist. Gold is suspected of being the chief contact for Dr. Fuchs.

The FBI in Washington told his chain of events:

Sobell failed to show up for work at the Reeves Instrument Co. in New York the day after the arrest of David Greenglass, a spy suspect, June 16. Julius Rosenberg, another person charged in the case, had attempted to persuade Greenglass to flee to Mexico.

[The New York Herald Tribune reported that the Reeves Instrument Co., located in a heavily guarded, four-story plant just east of Third avenue, is used to build, among other classified material, a "MECHANICAL BRAIN" that can plot performances of guided missiles and planes before their designs leave the drafting boards.]

The FBI discovered that Sobell flew to Mexico City June 22. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said Sobell fled to escape arrest.

Apparently Mrs. Sobell and their two children joined him in Mexico. She and the children were discovered at the Hamilton Hotel here shortly after Sobell was booked. The FBI had listed her home address as Flushing, N. Y.

Faces Possible Death Penalty

But neighbors said none of the family had been seen in two months.

[The Herald Tribune added that the F. B. I. traced Sobell to Mexico after they found his two-story Flushing home, which he owns, shuttered. A 1950 sedan, which had never been used, was in a locked garage. Quarts of milk, along with unread newspapers, were at the doorstep. All that the neighbors knew was that the Sobells had left—hurriedly.

American authorities prevailed on Mexican officials to deport Sobell.]

Mrs. Sobell refused to talk today except to say she was "very, very tired."

Sobell faces a possible death penalty, since the espionage conspiracy with which he is charged occurred during wartime. Specific charge is conspiracy to violate the 1946 Espionage Act.

A neighbor in Flushing, Mrs. Daniel D. Gurovitz, said Sobell never talked to his neighbors. She said that five or six weeks ago, FBI agents had talked with her.

Allies Gain in Three Sectors

000 might be "completely reduced" by tomorrow night.

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Eighth Army headquarters that the American success in the Changnyong area was deemed a signal victory.

The Marine attack sent the enemy's southern flank reeling into the path of the Twenty-Fourth Division, which heavily engaged it.

The Americans hit the crack Fourth Division so hard that many Red troops dropped their guns and fled west across the river.

Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commander of the Twenty-Fourth and of the combined Marine-Infantry attack, said the blow may have ended the fighting days of the Red Korean division.

"I think everything has gone very well," said the general. "He (the enemy) certainly has taken a hell of a licking. That's certain. I don't think that division will do much fighting for awhile.

"What I'd like to do is destroy that division entirely."

Government Leaves Taegu

Americans and South Koreans manning the thinly held northern front retook Pohang, secondary American supply port on the east coast, and Kigye, 10 miles inland, then captured high ground north of Kigye to make their defense line more cohesive.

Erickson sent word from Eighth Army Headquarters at 7:20 a. m. (5:20 p. m., Friday EDT) that the enemy appeared to be withdrawing from the Kigye-Pohang sector. An Army spokesman told Erickson Kigye was securely in United Nations hands.

A lone enemy plane strafed the First Cavalry Division area on the east side of the Naktong during the night, but hit nobody. It was the first enemy fighter to appear.

In the only other reported action of the night, a Red patrol of 20 men attacked the command post of the South Korean First Division north of Taegu and was driven off.

The Allies ordered Taegu evacuated so its war-swollen population of more than a half million civilians would not become entangled in military operations and to reduce danger of guerillas mingling with the refugees.

South Korean government leaders also left Taegu to set up a new capital elsewhere.

Civilians also were being evacuated from towns and villages all along the southwestern front, where the United States 35th and Negro 24th Regiments repulsed a savage Red assault and regained three heights.

'Hold Firm' North of Taegu

The most serious threat on the whole front remained on the north of Taegu, where the Reds shoved in three divisions estimated conservatively at 30,000 men. The South Korean First and Sixth Divisions and the United States 27th Regiment bucked into this danger point in close cooperation Friday and recaptured from half to all the ground lost Thursday, a dozen to 15 miles north of Taegu.

The Tokyo summary early Saturday morning said the defenders now "are holding firm in the face of the present main enemy effort."

There had been reason for urgent apprehension in Taegu early Friday. North Korean invaders and their Russian-built tanks had driven a menacing salient close to the highway village of Tabu, 12 miles north of Taegu.

Swiftly and quietly, one of the "fire brigades" of the Eighth Army commander, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, was rushed north from a point 50 miles away to bulwark the heroically battling first South Korean Division.

The "Fire Brigade" was the twenty-seventh "Wolfhound" Regiment, commanded by Lieut. Col. John H. Michaelis.

The Wolfhounds and the South Korean First Division jumped off in a counter-attack Friday morning. Planes strafed and rocketed the enemy, and Pershing tanks led the assault. Heavy artillery fire was laid down.

The Reds staggered back. Taegu was considered secure for the moment, but there was no guarantee that the Reds wouldn't renew their drive for the city at any time.

Bulge Objective Gained

In Changnyong bulge fighting, an Army spokesman told Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth the Americans had gained their immediate objective—all the strategic high ground overlooking the Naktong River.

The entire Red Fourth Division and an engineer regiment were thrown back by the American onslaught.

In the southernmost Korean front, south of the Changnyong sector, Americans also beat back a Red assault, and, in hand-to-hand clashes, recaptured three strategic mountain peaks. The United States Thirty-fifth and Twenty-fourth Infantry regiments carried the fight to the Reds in that area.

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton on the southern front said Red prisoners told interrogators they saw a Russian officer with the North Koreans before the Red attack began.

Board Postpones Carroll Action

Police Trial Board action against Pvt. John U. Carroll of the Ninth Precinct was postponed yesterday until August 29, due to the absence of his attorney.

Pvt. Carroll, 29, was suspended August 11, after a free-for-all fight in a chili restaurant he operates at 729½ 11th st. se. At the time, he was awaiting decision on whether he would be retired from the police force for physical disability.

In another case, Pvt. Charles F. Alexander, of the 6th precinct pleaded guilty to failing to appear at roll call on August 10. The case was taken under advisement for disposition.

Hulten To Give Talk

Charles M. Hulten, general manager of the State Department's "Voice of America," will be the chief speaker at the 3 p. m. Oregon Day program Sunday at Washington Memorial Chapel, Valley Forge, Pa.

Hulten, a former journalism professor at the University of Oregon, was named by Governor Douglas McKay to represent the State at the annual ceremony.

the foundation of national security." He would "never advocate economy at the expense of national defense," he said.

As for his stand on UMT, Byrd said the United States is now spending $4000 for every man in the standing Army, including compensation for dependents, housing, etc., "without firing a gun."

"And yet, boys are fighting in Korea without training."

If we send arms to Europe without troops to guard them, they 'may fall into the hands of the Russians and be used against us," Byrd declared.

Arming Small Nations

He warned that the Korean situation has opened up the whole question of "attempting to arm small nations over the world with no knowledge or confidence that they will fight when the time comes."

"We are attempting to arm 16 small European nations in the expectation and hope that they can withstand a Russian invasion," he said. "They can't do it. To my way of thinking, the only way to stop the march of Russia over Europe is to keep in Europe three to five million American men."

Earlier in yesterday's Legion session, Assistant Defense Secretary Paul Griffith appeared before the Legionnaires in a day-late address.

He staunchly defended Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson as the "outstanding administrator and executive in the entire country" and declared that "no one is better qualified to do the great job thrust upon him by happenings in the world."

Nothing has happened in the Korean war to indicate we would not be able to ward off an attack by any enemy he said. "Korea is a policing action undertaken at the request of the United Nations."

Griffith said the Korean war would be a "long-drawn-out affair." But there are now enough men, equipment and materials in Korea, or on the way, to "do the job," he added.

Elevator Operator Hurt Falling in Empty Shaft

Grover C. Keys, 64, an elevator operator, reported for work yesterday in the basement of the Tower Building, 14th and K sts. nw., and fell 15 feet down his empty elevator shaft

Police reported that a porter had taken the elevator to an upper floor. Keys, of 212 Q st. nw., was taken from the elevator well to Emergency Hospital, where he was admitted for lacerations to the head and right arm. He is in good condition, the hospital said.

Sale of Surplus Property Frozen Pending Survey

Sales of Government surplus were suspended yesterday.

The property will be screened again "to make sure nothing is sold as surplus that is needed in the defense effort."

The "freeze" order, issued by Jess Larson, administrator of general services, "covers war plants and supplies, equipment and material, civilian and military, regardless of previous authority for disposal."

Exempt is property which is perishable "or dangerous to public health and safety."

Larson said the Defense Department and other agencies had previously looked over excess property to see what they needed, but they will be given "another look" in view of the war emergency.

Unneeded property will be released from time to time for disposal.

Tank Flattens Auto

Windsor, Conn., Aug. 18 (U.P.).—A 33-ton National Guard Sherman tank rumbled around a corner today and right over Francis S. Lefebvre's automobile. Lefebvre had just got out of the car. He heard a crash, turned around and his car was nowhere in sight. The tank had flattened it.

North-South Defense Areas Asked by Virginia Legion

The State of Virginia should be divided into two major civil defense districts, aimed primarily to give mobile protection to Washington, a major target area, and three essential Virginia points.

This is the view of delegates to the American Legion, Department of Virginia, convention now being held in Alexandria; who yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution urging Governor John S. Battle to organize the State into such a pattern.

Then they paraded through the streets of Alexandria, after hearing speeches by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) and Assistant Secretary of Defense Paul W. Griffith, and before listening to Governor Battle at National Airport last night.

tricts would be separated along county lines north of the city of Richmond.

The function of both districts would be limited organization for self-protection and maximum organization of counties, cities and towns for mobile support of critical areas. In the northern district, Washington is the "major target area." In the southern district, three critical areas would be Richmond, Hampton Roads and Roanoke.

The convention offered Legion "manpower, facilities and energies" to the State to strengthen civil defense advisory committees at both the State and local levels.

In the afternoon, veterans of two world wars marched together under a blazing sun.

At the intersection of N. Washington st. and Princess st., Legionaires and members of the Armed Forces passed before a reviewing stand and turned "eyes right" to Governor John S. Battle of Virginia, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House aide, and Department Commander Ralph A. Johnson.

The Alexandria Fire and Police Department, Girl and Boy Scouts, the city band, and a number of visiting fire departments and organizational bands joined units of all services in the parade.

Colonel Waldron E. Leonard was marshall for the veterans organizations divisions. Gold Star Wives, Spanish-American War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, AMVETS, Disabled American Veterans, Irish War Veterans, Jewish War Veterans and the Reserve Officers Association also participated.

Alexandria Police Inspector Russell A. Hawes estimated about 5000 persons witnessed the procession.

Maryland Legion Demands UMT Law

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—Maryland's American Legion members today called upon Congress to pass a universal military training law.

In addition, delegates to the State convention asked for passage of antisubversion legislation before Congress adjourns.

These other proposals were unanimously indorsed by the Legionnaires:

1. A plan for Legion participation in the State's civil defense program.

2. A demand that political officeholders not be granted automatic deferment from military service.

Earlier, resolutions committeemen got a proposal that Maryland set up a home for aged veterans, their wives or their widows. The plan would involve an occupational colony.

The four-day session winds up Saturday with election of officers and a memorial service.

Still unopposed for State Legion commander was Lemuel Stevens, a retired naval captain from Snow Hill. Also unopposed was Chester F. Naumowicz, manager of the District of Columbia regional office of the Veterans Administration, candidate for head of the 40 and 8.

with the West as the West understands the world, but no major war if the West was vigilant and prepared.

In a speech before the Conference of Governors in Colorado Springs, Colo., in June, 1949, General Smith depicted the Russians as deliberately probing the Western democracies for weak spots and seeking to break their patience. He added:

"I am convinced that the Soviets, although exasperatingly difficult to deal with, do not want to risk war and will modify their aggressive policies when confronted with firm resistance, backed by recognizable force."

President Truman turned his attention to improving this country's intelligence set-up shortly after the end of World War II. He had been impressed by America's woeful deficiencies in this field, and considered many plans before deciding on the Central Intelligence Agency. One of the plans would have recognized the State Department as the coordinating unit for all Government departments in the area of foreign affairs.

The plan finally was drawn up by the Navy, but incorporated ideas advanced by both the State and War Departments.

Rear Admiral Sidney W. Souers, USNR., a Missouri businessman in civilian life, set up the Central Intelligence Agency, and Mr. Truman made him the first operating chief. General Hoyt Vandenberg then took over the directorship and served until he was made Chief of Staff of the Air Force. He was succeeded by Admiral Hillenkoetter.

General Smith, the director-designate, was born in Indianapolis, Ind., October 5, 1895. Unlike most high-ranking officers in the Army, he never attended the United States Military Academy, or even a civilian college. A first sergeant in the National Guard in 1917, he attended an officers' training camp after the outbreak of World War I and won a commission as a second lieutenant. In World War II he zoomed from major to lieutenant general.

General Eisenhower once said that he knew of only four men in the American Army capable of being great chiefs of staff, and he named "Beedle" as the best of the four. Winston Churchill had his own nickname for General Smith—"Bulldog."

Gen. Smith plans to name William H. Jackson as deputy director of CIA. Jackson, 49, war-time colonel on the staff of Gen. Omar Bradley in Europe, is now a partner in the New York investment banking firm of J. H. Whitney & Co. He was at one time a lawyer in Nashville, Tenn.

Jackson was a member of a survey team which canvassed the entire intelligence setup for the Government in 1948. The report based on this survey was delivered to President Truman and the National Secuity Council and led to the adoption of numerous recommendations affecting CIA operations.

Cutting Civil Defense

It is evident from the House Appropriations Subcommittee hearings on District civil defense that the dimensions of the local problem have escaped its members. Whether this is due to myopia on the part of subcommittee members or inadequate presentation by District officials, the result is highly unfortunate. To cut the budget request from $290,000 to $30,000, as the subcommittee proposes, is to fail utterly to appreciate the new urgency which the aggression in Korea gives to the preparation of American cities to withstand attack. Such a cut would make a mockery of the hard work that has gone into preliminary civil defense planning in Washington. It would doom the Capital to futile paper work without adequate staffs or supplies to translate the plans into preparation.

Throughout the hearings are interspersed some remarkable examples of congressional misunderstanding. For example, one Representative wanted to know why church bells and fire sirens could not be used as an attack warning signal. Aside from the impossible difficulties of coordination, here really would be a formula for confusion. Another Representative could not understand why it is essential to microfilm vital public records as a safeguard against destruction. Still another objected to a proposed expenditure for a civil defense radio net, insisting that fire and police equipment could be used. What are the fire and police departments supposed to do in emergency—remain silent? To cap the climax, another member thought that the "yellow telephone book" would be sufficient to draw up a list of specialists and materials needed in disaster.

From what we have seen, Washington's civil defense planning so far has been sound. Utilities and similar groups have cooperated well in preparing drafts, and the National Security Resources Board has lent considerable help. But what has been done is at best preliminary; plans need to be coordinated with those of other segments of the metropolitan area, and above all a working organization needs to be established. The $30,000 originally asked by the Commissioners was for preliminary work only; the $290,000 later requested in the 1951 budget was to get plans out of the infancy stage. Even the $290,000, as Engineer Commissioner Young has warned, will be far from adequate for staff salaries, quarters, warning signals, stockpiling of essential supplies and indoctrination of the public. But it at least would allow a workable start.

The ridiculous part of the penny-pinching, of course, is that the money actually is available in the District treasury, but an Act of Congress is required before it can be spent. We hope the full Appropriations Committee and the House itself will take a more realistic view of the compelling reasons why civil defense for Washington needs help rather than hindrance.

Irresponsible

When members of the International Longshoremen's Association in Boston, following the example of their brethren in New York, refused to unload a cargo of Russian crab meat from the S. S. American Manufacturer, officials of the United States Lines announced that hereafter their ships will accept no cargoes originating in Soviet ports nor any cargoes consigned to Soviet territory. Meanwhile, in New York, it was stated that the Cunard liner Parthia would return to England with another cargo of crab meat that the longshoremen had refused to touch.

There is not likely to be very much indignation about the behavior of the longshoremen. On the contrary, it has already been given a good deal of popular approval. Nobody has been injured by it, except perhaps the British, who, it seems, were obliged or induced to accept the crab meat in exchange for some machinery as part of a trade agreement with the Soviets, and perhaps a few who may, through some aberration of taste, prefer exotic crab meat to the native variety.

All the same, we have in this case a rather dangerous precedent. If the principle of refusing to unload cargoes for political reasons is developed into a general policy, it would amount to a power of censorship or veto exercised by the unions over trade agreements and other diplomatic arrangements. The principle, of course, is familiar enough in domestic labor practice where unionized workmen have refused to work on operations involving materials produced by nonunion labor, and in other cases for reasons arising out of jurisdictional squabbles. In the international sphere the Communists themselves have frequently encouraged the boycotting of certain cargoes by seamen or dock workers in the interest of Soviet policy or propaganda. Under some circumstances this boycotting of cargoes might even amount to a challenge of the sovereignty of the Government. In such cases there would be no choice save to move the cargo by force.

It also seems to us that refusals to unload a cargo constitute a tacit violation of contracts between the unions and the shipping companies. It is true that the longshoremen who boycotted the Russian crab meat were not acting upon any specific orders from their unions. Nevertheless, their action was condoned by union leaders who showed a curious irresponsibility throughout the whole episode. Instead of telling his men that he "hadn't the heart" to interfere in the matter, Mr. Joseph Ryan should have reminded them that the origin of the cargo was, strictly speaking, not any of their business.

Iron Curtain (U. S.)

The omnibus antisubversion bill which is Senator McCarran's riposte to the omnibus measure suggested by the President is a symptom of hysteria. Senator McCarran is himself exercised over the entry of Communists and totalitarians generally, and would bar them from our shores, and it is this part of the omnibus bill, now reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee, that is his particular contribution. Thus, with one sweep, the embassy of Yugoslavia might as well shut up shop, because its staff could not be recruited, and comings and goings would be impossible.

The theory animating the McCarran part of the omnibus bill is that all Communists coming here intend to operate in a manner prejudicial to American interests. As a blanket proposition this is not correct, as in the case, for instance, of the Yugoslav Communists. Would that we could learn that not all Communists are Stalinists! But, accepting McCarran's brainwave, what happens to our relations with the United Nations? Under Section 5 of the antisubversion bill only "the designated principal resident representative of a foreign government member of an international organization" enjoying immunity would seem to be exempted. That would prevent men from all Iron Curtain countries from coming to this country either to represent their countries or to work for the United Nations. But the most ironical note about the McCarran measure is that the ban would mean the exclusion of Spanish Falangists. Senator McCarran successfully spearheaded the 100 million dollar loan to Spain through the Senate; now, after this handout, he turns around, and keeps the Falangists out of the country.

This about-face—unintentional, of course—is accomplished by the provision barring aliens who are members of > . . . the Communist or other totalitarian party of any State of the United States, of any foreign state, or of any political or geographical subdivision of any foreign state; any section, subsidiary, branch, affiliate, or subdivision of any such association or party; or the direct predecessors or successors of any such association by what name such group or organization may have used, may now bear, or may hereafter adopt.

What Senator McCarran means by totalitarian is spelled out:

> The terms "totalitarian dictatorship" and "totalitarianism" mean and refer to systems of government not representative in fact, characterized by (A) the existence of a single political party, organized on a dictatorial basis, with so close an identity between such party and its policies and the governmental policies of the country in which it exists, that the party and the government constitute an indistinguishable unit, and (B) the forcible suppression of all opposition to such party.

No administrator, clearly, would have any option but to apply exclusion to Falangists—and, incidentally, Peronistas. Hysteria, indeed! One doubts whether the Judiciary Committee members pondered the implications of the McCarran bill when they reported it. They would do well first to turn to the President's suggestions, where the wheat is separated from the chaff of the half dozen antisubversion measures before Congress, and then to provide the State Department with more flexibility in treatment of former Communists seeking entrance for they may be valuable in the struggle against our present enemies. Senator McCarran would increase our enemies instead of coping with them—indeed, his is a variant of the buckshot approach to the world situation which is driving us headlong into general war and alienating our actual and potential allies.

Knowland Amendment

An amendment from the floor sponsored by Senator Knowland to the Senate's social security bill came close to blocking passage of the conference bill by the House. The effect of the amendment is to make it virtually impossible to compel the States to put their laws in conformity with the standards set by the Federal Government. Specifically it breaches the safeguards erected by Federal law to prevent a State from using unemployment insurance as a device to break strikes, undermine prevailing wage rates, or compel workers to sign so-called yellow dog contracts.

The House had to choose between sending the social security bill back to conference or passing it with the Knowland rider attached. Warned that recommital would almost certainly prevent enactment of any social security legislation this year, it finally approved the conference bill. Although we deplore the failure to eliminate the Knowland amendment, we conclude, on second thought, that the House was wise in refusing to jeopardize passage of reform legislation that is urgently needed by insisting on recommittal of the pending bill. While the bill is defective in many respects, it is a move in the right direction. Members of Congress have devoted many months to consideration of revisionist proposals, and the results of their study and the evidence accumulated in the course of prolonged hearings will provide valuable guidance for future legislative action. In any case, it is better to progress slowly than not to advance at all.

We hope, however, that the Knowland amendment will be eliminated by special repeal legislation. It was never considered by the Ways and Means Committee, was rejected by the Senate Finance Committee and passed by the Senate after a brief floor debate devoted largely to an exposition of its presumed merits. Consequently, if the House and Senate are afforded an opportunity to consider this amendment, divorced from its entangling legislative alliances, there is a good chance that they will vote to consign it to a deserved oblivion.

Manpower For Defense

Perhaps the outstanding military lesson of the campaign in Korea is that there is no such thing as easy let alone push button war.

The brunt of the battle has fallen on ground troops, the item in which the United States is the least equipped. The United States is relatively strong in airpower, strong in seapower, strong in the technology of weapons. But it takes men to operate these weapons, particularly ground troops—and the strain which the dispatch of a small force to Korea has put upon the Nation's military resources illustrates how woefully weak are the country's trained and ready reserves. It is an illusion to say that this country and the West can or should try to equal the Communists in military manpower, but it would be folly not to recognize that the provision of a permanent reservoir of trained men must have high priority.

That is why this newspaper believes that the enactment of universal military training legislation is of prime importance. President Truman, of course, is a long-time advocate of UMT, and his continuing support cannot be doubted. At the same time, his curious position on the current proposal for UMT—in which he first announced a decision not to push for it during this session of Congress, then authorized Defense Secretary Johnson to present it—must make it difficult for legislators to understand what he really wants. It is as if he had authorized Mr. Johnson to urge passage of the bill merely for the record.

As a matter of fact, the need for UMT becomes paramount as the various blitz victory schools are discredited. Each specialized cult—strategic bombing naval power—has had its press propagandists, to the detriment of the poor old infantry, which still has the dirty work to do. Each of these exclusionist theories has represented a search for a simple solution, a quest in which this newspaper has never shared. Three years ago, in calling for UMT, we noted:

> There is an unfortunate tendency in some circles to accept the all too facile explanation that the atomic bomb renders all traditional employment of military manpower obsolete.

Again, in April, 1948, we observed:

> Air power will not suffice without land and naval forces; and no amount of airplanes or weapons will be meaningful without the personnel to man them and the assurance that replacements are available.

The universal training bill which Mr. Johnson has asked for is substantially similar to bills proposed earlier on the basis of the 1947 Compton report. It would provide for six months of intensive training for youths in the 17-20 age bracket, allowing them the option after initial training of remaining on duty or becoming part of the active reserve. The only question here is whether the six-month training period is long enough. There is no thought, of course, of instituting UMT while the Korean emergency is on; the request is for standby authority to be implemented when the armed forces can spare men and facilities for training.

Selective service has now been invoked to meet an emergency situation. But certainly universal training, which recognizes the common defense obligation of all citizens, would be a far fairer method of meeting armed forces requirements than the draft as it was used spasmodically in peacetime. Moreover, a citizen army of trained reserves on the Swiss model is the very antithesis of the Prussian concept of a large professional army. As Secretary Johnson stated in his letters to the Armed Services Committees, UMT is "the only means of providing on a continuing basis sufficient numbers of men for the reserve forces." Indeed, with the commitments under the Atlantic Pact and the police support which the United Nations must be assured if it is to prevent other outbreaks such as that in Korea, anything less than a universal military training program is unrealistic. Contingents from Thailand and the Philippines to fight in the Korean war are welcome because they emphasize the world responsibility in Korea. But, as General MacArthur's message testifies, they are also welcome for the very practical reason that the United States does not have more trained men it could easily spare.

The principal question in the presentation of UMT legislation now is tactical. Assuredly there are other mobilization and arms bills which are more urgent, but consideration of UMT now ought not to jeopardize other essential legislation if it is properly managed. At the very least it could mean that hearings would be held and the way paved for enactment while legislators are in the mood.

LIGHT

The light comes hurtling from the sun
And falls across the mountain,
The light drifts from moon and stars,
And laces through the fountain.
"Let there be light!" the God of stars,
Of birds and crouching thunder,
Threw back the borders of his cloak
And swept the dark asunder.
I reach my hand toward the sun,
The sun shines down on me,
The light is strong, and fierce and kind,
Bound, yet forever free.

Consultative Council

If a fresh attack of aggression should break out in the world next week, and the Security Council should be unable to act, what then? One possible answer is the proposal for a United Nations Consultative Council.

This Council, which is authorized by Article 106 of the U. N. Charter, would be able to act on behalf of the U. N. without any veto limitations. By means of this council, the United Nations would not be powerless to make decisions calling for collective action.

Because the Security Council has not perfected those special agreements (world police force and atom control) mentioned in Article 43 of the U. N. Charter, it is unable to exercise its responsibilities as intended under Article 42 of the Charter. Thus, Article 106 is applicable to the present world situation.

In the Consultative Council, all decisions, substantive and procedural, could be by majority vote, and there would be no veto power. The five permanent members of the Security Council would belong, and additional nonpermanent members could be elected by the Assembly in a manner similar to election to the Security Council.

Those desiring to obstruct the U. N.'s progress toward world peace may claim that such a Council is illegal. But, it is specifically authorized by Article 106 of the U. N. Charter.

22nd Psalm

Having given much space to your August 11 review of the new Roman Catholic version of the Book of Psalms perhaps you will permit me to call attention to one error in the translation. In adapting the King James version of the sixteenth verse of the Twenty-second Psalm, the translators have chosen to perpetuate an error long ago discredited by Christianity's own most competent scholars.

That the phrase "They pierced my hands and my feet," is an obvious distortion of the original Hebrew text is now generally conceded. According to the Companion Bible published by the Oxford University Press, the Hebrew text reads Ka-ari, which means "as a lion, the K meaning "as." All existing translations of this text, however, take the K as part of the verb Karu' and alter the vowel points to make it read, "they pierced."

This mistranslation may have been made inadvertently by the Alexandrian scholars who translated the Septiragent version of the Hebrew Scriptures into Greek in the third or second century B. C., which all subsequent translations adapted; or it may be one of the numerous examples of an early Christian practice of deliberately corrupting the Septuagent text with the object of inserting as many proofs as possible of the appearance of Jesus and of his Messiahship.

Be that as it may, the phrase should read, "Like a lion they are at my hands and my feet." It will be seen that this rendition removes all traces of ambiguity from the verse, and the true meaning of the Psalm, as a symbolic Hebrew poem, depicting one of the many tragic episodes in Jewish history is brilliantly and eloquently revealed. Actually there is nothing of a Messianic nature anywhere in this beautiful Psalm.

Vatican Mission

The most dangerous thing that could happen to divide the American people at this time would be for President Truman to send a mission to the Vatican.

Protestants throughout this country should go and have a look-see at the enslavement of three million Protestants up in the city of New York who have become "second class citizens" through the seizure of the city administration (political and economic) by the Roman Catholic political hierarchy.

WILLIAM KRUGER,
Associate Editor, Protestant Statesman & Nation.
Washington.

An Associated Press story from Geneva in your issue of August 15 under the headline "Truman Urged Not To Name Vatican Envoy," carries a quoted statement by American members of the International Council of Christian Churches which I can only hope has been garbled in transmission even more seriously than the grammatical structure of your text would indicate. As I interpret the statement, it means that the "world," after defeating communism, may have to make war against the Catholic Church. If this is the view of responsible American Protestant churchmen, we had better have it clearly stated right now.

We should not expect to be informed of the strategic concept for future operations against the Holy See; that should be a military secret. But what, we may properly ask the reverend gentlemen, is the casus belli? Geneva would seem to be a peculiarly appropriate place for the issue of a manifesto in which soldiers of Christ renounce the Prince of Peace.

"On Withering Away"

Your August 13 editorial "On Withering Away," offers the tentative conclusion that "audacious proposals to begin the withering away of the state have been raised at this time" in the Soviet Union. Through no fault of yours, the conclusion, based on what is described as a recent article by Stalin, seems to have been reached as a result of a distortion of a sentence due, I suppose, to an error in transmission by a wire service.

The "article" in question is actually a letter "to Comrade Kholopov" which appeared under the signature of J. Stalin in Bolshevik. I have not seen the Russian text but an English translation has become available in the August 4 issue of the Cominform Journal with the impossible title "For a lasting peace, for a people's democracy." I assume that the editors of that journal would take special care not to mistranslate communications signed by one J. Stalin.

A comparison of the two versions of the passage in Stalin's letter which has attracted your attention reveals the error in the version used by you. In The Washington Post Stalin is quoted as saying that "the Exegetes and Talmudists in our party and in our country have begun to demand that the party take measures for the speedy withering away of the state." In the Cominform version the same passage reads as follows: ". . . After the victory of the Socialist revolution in our country, dogmatists and Talmudists in our party began demanding that the party should take steps to ensure the speedy withering away of our state."

I think that the difference in the tenses used and the reference to the period following what Stalin calls "the victory of socialism" in the Soviet Union, make it clear that the writer was referring to suggestions of that type which were current in Russia way back in the twenties and early thirties. This conclusion is further strengthened by an examination of the full text of the Stalin letter which reveals that the entire matter of the "withering away of the state" is brought in only incidentally, by way of an example to illustrate the main point Stalin is trying to make.

The letter to the real or imaginary Comrade Kholopov is supposed to be an answer to an inquiry in which the curious comrade had pointed out that Stalin's recent pronouncement on the subject of linguistics seems to him in glaring contradiction to what Stalin had written or said earlier on the same subject.

To this J. Stalin replies that both his formulae "are correct, each for its epoch." The problem of withering away of the state is merely brought in to illustrate the idea that good Marxists find no contradiction between Engels' statement that after the revolution the state is bound to wither away and Stalin's insistence that the Soviet state should be strengthened still further. Here, too, each formula is "correct" in its time.

If I may offer a guess as to the basic meaning of the letter (which is clearly not limited to the worries of one A. Kholopov about linguistics) I would say that it is to discourage the critical examination of current acts and pronouncements of the Soviet leaders in the light of teachings by Marx, Engels, Lenin, or even by quoting at Stalin his own earlier statements There apparently still are in the Soviet Union "dogmatists and Talmudists" or, in other words, people who still think logically and critically. They are referred to throughout the Stalin letter in the present tense. However, there is no reason to assume that the asking of questions is currently connected with the problem of "withering away of the state," much as some Soviet citizens would probably like to see their regime (if not the state) wither away, no matter whether or not this would be in accordance with theory.

SAMUEL L. SHARP,
Washington.

Editor's Note: The statements ascribed to Stalin in the editorial were taken verbatim from a United Press dispatch from Moscow, dated August 1. Mr. Sharp may be correct in supposing a confusion of tenses in the translation of Stalin's article as quoted in the dispatch. Even so, it seems to us significant that the question of "withering away" should have been raised at all.

Mr. Sharp errs in saying that we concluded from the dispatch that "audacious proposals to begin the withering away of the state have been raised at this time." Actually, we said that "We are not obliged to believe [such proposals] were raised by anybody." What we did conclude was that "party-line organs will bear even closer study than usual." It strikes us that the content of Mr. Sharp's letter represents an implicit agreement with this conclusion.

Nonpolitical Patriotism

By Malvina Lindsay

Third Force Needed

"WHAT I'm looking for," said the man with the lantern, "is a nonpolitical patriot. He's what this country needs—a whole legion of him."

"No nonpolitical patriot," said the man wearing a campaign button, "could ever get in a spot where he could make his patriotism count, except of course on the battlefield. Anyway it's patriotic to be political, take part in Government."

"The patriot I'm looking for would vote, undoubtedly, and belong to a political party. But he'd have no personal political ambition to color his patriotism. What's our great national weakness right now? Why, that nearly every public question becomes a political or economic bone for an alley dog fight!"

"But this is a campaign year."

"All the more reason for a third force of disinterested, capable citizens, men and women, to grapple with problems of the day—on a nonpay or nominal pay basis."

"You mean dollar-a-year men?"

"No. There'd be more anonymity, less prestige for the patriots I'm trying to round up. They could be given a ribbon of honor to show they'd contributed one, two, or three years of their talent, knowledge, experience to helping straighten out their Nation's dilemma."

"THAT SOUNDS visionary. What could these noble patriots actually do since they wouldn't hold office?"

"One big thing would be to sit on boards, committees, commissions investigating, and judging in the many controversies undermining the Nation's strength. The public's confused by all this propagandizing and catcalling. It needs objective appraisal of issues—especially now with a campaign beginning."

"I'll bet your nonpolitical patriots would have their prejudices too."

"Possibly so. But they wouldn't have the Achilles' heel of personal political ambition. They could examine questions without thinking of votes or their standing with their party power cliques. What's the most insidious foe to a man's integrity? Personal ambition. Think of the promising men in Congress who've just missed greatness because personal ambition gave them political myopia."

"Just the same, the ambitious politician gets the public's ear."

"But not always its confidence. Look at the decline in confidence in the congressional investigation since it's become a forum for political haggling. Worse still, it frequently violates our cherished Anglo-American traditions of justice and fair trial procedure."

"Then you'd turn all investigation over to your legion of patriots?"

"No indeed. But when issues got bogged down in political guttersniping, there should be available experienced jurists, lawyers, social scientists who could take over such inquiries and report as fairly as possible to the public."

"THAT sounds pretty Utopian."

"Not at all. The trend's already set in. Look at the commissions appointed by the President to study public problems; at the lay committees and consultants that frequently help Government officials. All this needs to be extended and more national honor attached to it. Every citizen of ability and achievement should have the opportunity to volunteer himself for national service, as does the younger citizen who goes to battle."

"After all, though, the political officeholder often makes a big sacrifice."

"Sure he does. And he may be a great patriot who puts public good first. But in public opinion his judgment is often suspect. That's why social scientists are now so widely advocating nonpolitical, nonsalaried professional advisers (and are even ready to recruit them) to serve as advisers to national and international agencies."

"On the trail of any nonpolitical patriots yet?"

"No, but we've got 'em. We've always had 'em. I guess the signers of the Declaration of Independence weren't thinking of their personal ambition, or even their necks. That was the big thing the Founding Fathers had—many of them, that is—a cause bigger than themselves. It's what most human beings who've left anything of permanent good behind have had. I'm betting on finding some Americans like that today. When you need anything desperately enough it usually shows up."

Secret Papers

Strange how our atomic secrets and confidential plans get into the wrong hands.

After allowing this Dr. Fuchs and nobody knows how many helpers he had to range all over the country and pry into our atomic plants. Now comes the report from London that an American has lost a whole gripful of drawings and specifications for an atomic bomb plant. He had it stached away in a railroad compartment, went out on a casual errand, and when he returned the bag of confidential matter was gone.

Just why is anyone commissioned or allowed to traipse all over the world with secret Government papers and leave them in a locker unprotected and without guard?

Baruch's Vision

By Marquis Childs

Right-Wing Opposition

FEW MEN have participated in so much of the history of our times as Bernard M. Baruch. Now observing his eightieth birthday amid a chorus of praise from almost every quarter, Baruch has become a legend during his lifetime.

Childs

As is always the case, the actuality is far more complex than the legend. And Dr. Facts, moving in and out of the Washington scene in the role of preceptor, is the first to look with good-natured skepticism at certain aspects of the Baruch legend.

So often he has been so right. There was that time in 1938 when he returned from Europe to go immediately to the White House and a conference with President Roosevelt. As he he came out of the President's office, he gave an interview in which he urged that American rearmament be pushed with all possible speed in view of the threat of Nazi conquest.

Immediately, the Goebbels propaganda machine in Berlin was turned full blast against Baruch everywhere in the world with particular emphasis in this country. The propaganda in America was based on the "merchants of death" concept which had been given wide currency by a Senate investigating committee headed by Senator Gerald Nye. The isolationist and extreme right-wing press helped this along by taking up the warmonger theme.

THERE is a striking parallel in what is happening today. In the present crisis Baruch has urged measures to meet the gravity of the situation, including economic controls on at least a standby basis, sufficient to halt inflation and maintain order in the face of defense spending.

For this he is being attacked once again by the same sources. Representative Clare Hoffman of Michigan put in the Congressional Record a derisive editorial from the Chicago Tribune together with an attack by Wilford I. King of the Committee for Constitutional Government rebuking Baruch for urging economic controls.

The reasons for this animus are not hard to discover. Baruch has never hesitated to take a stand because it might offend one segment or another of public opinion. Thus he was quick to condemn the action of the Truman Administration in rushing to take off the excess profits tax as soon as World War II had ended. In Baruch's view, this more than any other single act contributed to the spiral of inflation.

Although it is scarcely known outside his circle of friends, Baruch was invited to visit Moscow in 1948 by Andrei Gromyko, then Russian delegate to the United Nations. As they sparred over plans to control atomic energy, Gromyko had come to have great respect for Baruch. He several times suggested that the American go to Moscow for a talk with "the great marshal," as Gromyko invariably referred to Stalin.

IN THE early summer of 1948 as he was about to start for Europe, Baruch was granted a visa to visit Russia. This action by the Soviet Embassy in Washington was taken on a few hours notice, which was almost unprecedented.

Then in London Baruch got a message that he considered an indication the State Department did not approve his journey to Moscow. He therefore changed his plans, only learning much later that his good friend, Gen. George C. Marshall, then Secretary of State, would have approved if he had been consulted. While such speculation is idle, that visit might have altered the unhappy course of recent history.

In contrast to his great and good friend Winston Churchill, Baruch has never held a public office. But through the years, beginning with the era of Woodrow Wilson, he has exerted more influence than most office holders.

Churchill is out of power in England. The dispatches tell of the greatest crowd in the history of No. 10 Downing Street gathered to see him go in to urge Prime Minister Attlee to call Parliament back at once to consider measures to meet the crisis. Attlee refused the request as urged by both Conservatives and Liberals.

In a different sense Baruch is "out of power" in this country as a result of his differences with President Truman during the 1948 political campaign. That gives some people great satisfaction. Among them are those who seem to hope, in spite of the danger the country is in, that the Truman Administration will fail to meet the needs of the hour.

U. S. Insists Europe Share In Troop Role

Western Europe must work harder for its own military salvation before the United States agrees to send more troops to bolster spirits and security across the Atlantic.

That is the Department of Defense response to insistent French pressure for an American promise to supply a supreme commander and at least five additional divisions for western Europe defense.

This reply has been put forth informally, top military officials here said, because France so far has relied upon the press and unofficial conversations to press her request for specific United States military commitments.

"We will talk about naming an American commander-in-chief for western Europe when he has a force to command," one high American officer commented.

He recalled that military leaders of the Atlantic Pact nations are generally agreed about how many divisions, combat ships and planes would be needed to stop a Russian onslaught. Offers of ground forces for the common defense have been made, but this official said the total so far falls far short of over-all requirements.

In a note on August 6, France advised the United States of its intention to arm an additional 15 divisions but said this would require "outside aid" in the form both of arms and financing. Presumably, France would look to the United States for this aid.

The White House said yesterday that President Truman found the French note "extremely gratifying."

There was no comment, however, on a French suggestion that the United States and Britain should station "a sufficient number of divisions" in continental Europe.

American officials believe that western Europe has little cause to doubt United States sincerity and determination to oppose Communist aggression. They say the whole world can witness the build-up of United States military manpower and armaments at a cost of billions of dollars.

"We will fight in Europe if necessary just as we are fighting in Korea," one informed officer said, "but we have the right to expect that the Europeans will do their share of the fighting."

Defense officials here fear that a specific American pledge at this time might defeat the whole concept of mutual defense. They give two reasons:

1. It would encourage the Communist propaganda that paints Uncle Sam as a dictator over subservient Western allies.

2. It would tend to spread a feeling already current to some degree in Europe that "if America is going to boss and do the job, why can't we just sit and wait?"

U. S. officials generally oppose Winston Churchill's idea of a common defense ministry for western Europe, preferring to work through the Atlantic Pact toward an Allied general staff.

Career Diplomat Goes to Poland

JOSEPH FLACK,
a career diplomat, now ambassador to Costa Rica, has been nominated by President Truman to be United States ambassador to Communist Poland. He will succeed John W. Ambassador Gallman has been called home to become deputy for foreign affairs at the National War College. Ambassador Flack is a native of Grenoble, Pa.

Senators Urge Peace Drive Against USSR

By The Associated Press

Twenty-eight Senators called on President Truman yesterday to urge a new and all-out crusade to convince the Russian people that America wants peace.

They proposed "total mobilization and total engagement of our psychological and spiritual forces" for the peace offensive against the Kremlin.

The bipartisan group, led by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), presented to Mr. Truman a letter which called for expansion of the "Voice of America" and other Government information facilities.

"But," they wrote, "more than money we need a new vigor, a new imagination, a new directness and plainness of speech. We need the message to be continuously, indefinitely reiterated. We need to use means new and old, thought of and unthought of, traditional and revolutionary."

Still Might 'Soften' Reds

The letter said the program the Senators had in mind might "soften and erode the foundations of the Politburo, escape the appalling expenditure of life and treasure with which we are faced, and thus escape the totalitarian control of our lives which neither you, we nor the American people can contemplate without dismay."

"Let us tell the Russian people that we want to live in peace with them and hope that their rulers will not compel us to fight them. We would like to help them to get a better life from their rich soil, forests and mines."

Flanders said the President expressed complete sympathy with the proposal.

Strategy Unit Formed

Creation of a psychological warfare high command, under supervision of Secretary of State Acheson, was announced Friday by the State Department. The new group is to devise propaganda and counter-propaganda strategy to combat Russian propaganda.

Signers of the letter were Democratic Senators Robertson of Virginia, Stennis of Mississippi, Chapman of Kentucky, Douglas of Illinois, Fulbright of Arkansas, Hayden of Arizona, Holland of Florida, Humphrey of Minnesota, Kerr of Oklahoma, Lehman of New York, Maybank of South Carolina and Sparkman of Alabama.

Republican signers were Senators Flanders of Vermont, Smith of New Jersey, Smith of Maine, Bricker of Ohio, Bridges of New Hampshire, Butler of Nebraska, Capehart of Indiana, Young of North Dakota, Donnell of Missouri, Hendrickson of New Jersey, Ives of New York, Mundt of South Dakota, Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Thye of Minnesota, Wherry of Nebraska and Wiley of Wisconsin.

Russia Adds Another U. N. Boycott Unit

Lake Success, Aug. 18 (AP).—Russia extended her boycott to one more United Nations body today, making it clear that she is not yet ready to resume her normal role in the U. N.

The new boycott affects the General Assembly's special committee on information from non-self-governing territories. It is the thirty-first U. N. organ so affected.

The Soviet boycott-strike started last January 10 in protest against the continued presence of Chinese Nationalist representatives in the U. N.

Soviet Delegate Jakob Malik, in returning to the Security Council to assume the presidency during August, set aside his earlier declaration that Russia would not take part in any further meeting at which Nationalist China was represented.

Malik still has not answered two important questions: Will he stay on in the Council after his term as president expires August 31? Will Russia show up at the fall session of the General Assembly September 19? Most delegates believe the answer to both questions is yes, but they admittedly have no definite information.

The Security Council delegates, meanwhile, enjoyed a weekend respite from their bitter and apparently fruitless wrangling over the Korean problem.

The Council will meet Monday in an informal closed-door session to try once more to break the procedural stalemate over Korean representation in United Nations discussions. The next public meeting will be Tuesday.

In the meantime the United Nations started folding its tent and moving into permanent quarters today in its new 39-story skyscraper office building in New York City.

The first truck load of U. N. office equipment hit the road from this makeshift headquarters to the U. N.'s new glass-and-marble building in Manhattan this afternoon.

After five years of camping out—in London, Hunter College, and at this converted factory building—the world organization was at last headed into a home of its own.

Negro Woman Lawyer Slated for U.N. Post

NYHT News Service

A negro woman lawyer is slated to become the first of her race to be a United States delegate to the United Nations General Assembly meeting in New York next month.

Mrs. Edith Sampson of Chicago, the only woman ever to receive a master's degree in law from Loyola university of Chicago, will receive the appointment unless there is a last-minute change of plan.

Her appointment was recommended to President Truman by the State Department on two grounds: 1, that she is eminently qualified; and 2, that her appointment to a high post which there is no doubt she can fill capably will cut the legs from under Russian propaganda claims that Negroes are an oppressed people denied high office in the United States.

To this extent, her appointment would be a counter-propaganda move, and a powerful one.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson will head the General Assembly delegation on which Mrs. Sampson is scheduled to serve with former Sen. John Foster Dulles, of New York, Republican foreign policy adviser to the Truman Administration, and others. Mr. Truman is expected to announce the appointments next week.

Plastiras Out As Premier Of Greece

Athens, Greece, Aug. 18 (AP).—King Paul today accepted the resignation of Premier Nicholas Plastiras and entrusted formation of a new government to a liberal former Premier, Sophocles Venizelos.

The crisis was brought to a head yesterday by resignation of five Liberal members of the cabinet.

Venizelos had demanded that Plastiras, head of the leftist National Progressive Union, quit. There had been cabinet resentment over the Premier's policy of amnesty for Communists convicted of treason.

A liberal statement said the government had "lost completely the confidence of public opinion." It said distrust and uncertainty had affected the economy of the country and benefits previously gained were neutralized by an increasing cost of living.

Plastiras' resignation surprised political circles by its quickness. Earlier, a spokesman had said he would await return of Deputy Premier George Papandreou, now in Washington.

There was strong likelihood Venizelos will try to reconstitute the center coalition government without Plastiras, by including Progressive Republican Emmanuel Tsouderos and Social Democrat Papandreou, with himself as Premier.

Venizelos, who held the Premiership briefly with a Liberal cabinet after the March 5 parliamentary elections, resigned when the United States expressed displeasure over his lack of a broad majority in Parliament.

The President's Calling List

President Truman had the following White House appointments yesterday:

10 a. m.—Cabinet.

12 noon—George A. Garrett, Ambassador to Ireland.

12:30 — Senator Thomas (D., Utah).

12:45—Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

1—Lunch.

3:15—Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) and other legislators.

Saigon Talks End

Saigon, French Indo-China, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The 23-man British military mission left here today for Singapore after two days of secret talks with high-ranking French military authorities. A French spokesman said the officials had agreed not to issue a communique.

Aggression Anywhere Hit By 'Peace' Unit

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug 18 (AP).—The executive committee of the Communist-backed World Defenders of Peace today condemned "foreign intervention by force of arms in the internal affairs of any people" and called for a general reduction in every form of armament.

Three resolutions proposed by O. John Rogge of New York, a vice president of the movement, failed to come up in the committee, which wound up a three-day meeting. Among other things, he proposed a condemnation of aggression "from whatever source and by whatever country" and accused North Korea of aggressive war.

The committee said it was against aggression "wherever it may occur" and welcomed peaceful moves to stop the Korean war. Rogge abstained in voting on the resolution, which all the other delegates favored.

Soviet Journalist Ilya Ehrenburg, who was among the 40 or so persons at the committee meeting, said he had been talking with Rogge about Rogge's resolutions, but they came too late for action.

European Assembly Moves To Strengthen Unity Program

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 18 (AP). The European Consultative Assembly adopted overwhelmingly today resolutions to reinforce the Council of Europe and its own authority.

The resolutions would:

1. Ask each member state to appoint a minister for European affairs to handle European council matters.

2. Modify the present single-power veto within the all-powerful committee of ministers (the Council's upper house) by enabling a minister to approve a project without the obligation of applying it in his own country.

3. Provide for Assembly resolutions to be submitted to the various national parliaments for consideration.

4. Have all members of the Consultative Assembly elected by the national legislatures. Some are already, but others, including the British delegates, are appointed by their governments.

Other resolutions called for tighter links between the Council of Europe and other intergovernmental institutions such as the five-power Brussels Pact secretariat and the Marshall Plan's Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC).

Another urged that close liaison be set up between European organizations and "North American Nations"—the United States and Canada.

These resolutions were embodied in a report from the Assembly's general affairs committee based on studies and hearings in the past year.

The resolutions now go to the ministerial committee, which is scheduled to meet in October.

Three other items which would materially alter the European Council's structure were referred to the general committee, to be reported out later in the session. These would give the council executive and legislative powers. They include a proposal for a United States of Europe, to tie in overseas territories and to establish a "Federal Pact" among a limited number of countries within the Council.

Shimon Tells of 'Wire Taps' of grey-market conditions in the Washington auto business; the cars were bought while Shimon was detailed to assist the committee; but the committee headed by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) did not go into the auto purchases of individuals as such or into police auto purchases.

Shimon, whose work for the Macy committee won him a commendation in 1948 from Macy, said, according to Chairman Pepper, that Macy did not know of the wire tapping that was done, nor did Macy order it.

Pepper said Shimon told of tapping the phones of Advice, Inc., in early 1948—one of the officers was John P. Monroe, proprietor of the Big Red House on R st., where Cabinet officers and Congressmen were entertained lavishly early in World War II.

Pepper said Shimon testified that the Advice, Inc., tap was done for the Macy committee. Chairman Macy said recently his group had no interest that he recalled in Monroe or Advice, Inc. Pepper said that Shimon told of shadowing another officer of Advice, Inc., and finding that man shadowed by two other men.

At another time while tapping Advice, Inc., from the Gralyn Hotel, according to Pepper's description of Shimon's testimony, the telephone line went dead; the lieutenant rushed down to the telephone box where the tap was made, and saw two other men rushing away with recording equipment.

Pepper said Shimon also testified he knew Henry Grunewald, that they were close friends socially, but did not recall visits described by an earlier witness by Shimon to the Munsey Building where Grunewald had an office. Grunewald, about 55, has been described as an ex-FBI man, part-time consultant for Pan American Airways, and an intermediary between Shimon and the Senate war committee. He is reported to be out of town.

Pepper said that Shimon on advice of counsel refused to answer any question about the content of information received by wire tapping on the ground that requiring him to do so would be requiring him to commit an offense in violation of his Constitutional rights. "Divulging" informaton has been construed as the key factor for an indictable offense in connection with wire tapping.

The Grand Jury here ended its investigation of the Hughes' wire tapping last week without returning indictments. It reached that decision at the end of the three-year period set by the Statute of Limitations.

Trailed Lappin to Hotel

Pepper said Shimon's testimony was that the trailing of Lappin led to the suites of Hughes' associates, first at the Carlton and later at the Mayflower. He said Shimon told of ending the wire tapping when he did not see Lappin around anymore. He said Shimon testified a tap of a public telephone in the drugstore at the Mayflower, with a listening post on the mezzanine, played a part in trailing Lappin.

Pepper said the committee had not yet asked Shimon about the testimony of Pvt. John McHale that he saw Shimon put a $1000 bill into his wallet soon after the Hughes wire tapping, and that he heard later Shimon never did a wire tapping job unless he got at least $1000.

In another development, Pepper asked the Justice Department for FBI reports on wire tapping which had gone to the Grand Jury, and asked Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder for Shimon's income tax returns from 1940 to date. The requests were made by letters, which Pepper made public.

At the same time, it was disclosed that Daniel B. Maher, former legal trouble shooter for the District Commissioners on police matters, brought Pvt. McHale's original report on the alleged wire tapping to the attention of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, about a year ago. Maher, now in private practice after resigning from his District job, would not comment on this.

U. S. Tightens Exports Curbs To Red Lands

The United States yesterday tightened controls over exports to Russia and her satellites, and dock workers in New York refused to unload Russian furs arriving on the British liner Mauretania.

The longshoremen were described as mostly war veterans "who figure we're practically at war with Russia now." The men voted also not to handle any goods from Russia in the future.

The Commerce Department clamped down controls on 1100 so-called "war potential" items to Russia and 13 other nations in the Soviet bloc, effective immediately.

Up to now, exports of all United States goods have been permitted without individual licenses if the value of the shipmnts was small enough. The limits ranged from $1 to $1000, depending on the type of goods.

Under the new order, shipments of the controlled items must be licensed no matter how small the amounts.

The countries affected are Albania, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, the Russian zone of Germany, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Manchuria, North Korea, Poland (and Danzig), Romania and the U.S.S.R.

Officials said controlled goods are going to those countries only in small lots. They said the action will not have a particularly heavy impact, but does constitute a general tightening of export controls.

In New York, members of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, Local 824, shook their heads when asked to unload $138,000 worth of Russian furs from the Mauretania.

Other union members earlier had refused to unload shipments of Russian crabmeat from British ships, forcing the shipments to be returned to England.

Commerce Department officials here said Russian furs are the most important of Russia's exports to the United States, representing about half the total for the first five months of this year.

Racketeers Rule Businesses, Probers Say

and the committee would look into it.

The committee report, in contrast, stuck to the facts on the record, developed almost exclusively by Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.), Chief Counsel Rudolph Halley and the anonymous staff.

The report said there is "substantial and strongly convincing evidence" that organized criminal groups are busy in many states and these criminals have lots of money (the report refrained from the usual practice of estimates). Much of it flows into legitimate enterprises but the racketeers "often use the same tactics of intimidation and monopolization which characterize their criminal activities" and thus are unfair business competitors.

The basic question, the senators said, "is not whether gambling or any other form of illegal activity is morally good or bad. It is rather that we must weigh the full evil effects upon the body politic of permitting powerful groups of criminals to utilize the channels of interstate commerce for the purpose of controlling illegal enterprises" when it is clear they obtain power by violence and intimidation, by attempting to corrupt local politicians and by "obtaining overbearing economic power" by not paying all their taxes and "by means of monopoly."

The story of gambling in Florida, recounted in the report in summary (and reported in this newspaper in detail in past weeks), backed up these conclusions.

The report said Dade County (Miami) Sheriff Jimmy Sullivan has done nothing to enforce gambling laws, that his testimony was often "implausible" and hardly credible. The facts of his increased wealth, his present attempt to amend past income tax returns and testimony as to "actual financial corruption" in his office made his explanations hard to believe.

Racketeer Muscled In

As to Miami Beach, the report said the S. & G. bookie syndicate (four local men until a Chicago racketeer muscled in last year) "has had a firm grip" on the city council.

Just north of Miami is Broward County, locale of the biggest gambling houses in Florida in which Frank Erickson, No. 1 bookie now serving a jail term, was a partner. The sheriff of Broward, Walter Clark, has been suspended from office by the governor and yesterday it was disclosed in Miami that he, his brother and a number of others have been indicted on gambling charges growing out of the Senate hearings in Florida.

The committee report took Clark apart as had the public hearings which showed the biggest part of his income came from ownership of a firm engaged in bolita, the Florida version of the numbers racket.

At another point, the report said that the committee investigation "has not yet proceeded far enough to warrant a conclusion as to whether or not the various criminal organizations are knit into one or more Nation-wide syndicates." But "it does begin to appear that the methods of operation are strikingly similar and either by coincidence or design follow a common pattern.

Combine Activities

"It is clear, moreover, that there are several strong and powerful organizations with lines of interrelationship and cooperation between them which makes it feasible for them at least occasionally to combine their activities."

The report said many of today's racketeers sprang from "the Capone gang in Chicago, the Costello gang in New York, the Purple gang in Detroit and so on over the country."

"Virtually all these gangs," the report said, "survived the demise of prohibition; reactivated, they have turned with new vigor and with the profit they were able to hoard during the bootlegging 20s to a new and probably more lucrative racket—organized gambling."

In discussing the interwoven fabric of politics and crime in Florida, the report noted the big contributions made to the 1948 primary campaign of Gov. Fuller Warren. One of these contributors, to the extent of about $140,000, was Louis E. Wolfson, the Jacksonville man who heads the syndicate which recently took over Washington's Capital Transit Co.

No Connection, Apparently

The report said Wolfson "apparently had no connection with any other matter" discussed in the report, that is, with any of the racketeering or gambling.

A section on infiltration by racketeers into legitimate business said "gangster methods" often are used. The report said "specific factual data" has been gathered on this subject, but that it will be withheld until later. It was pointed out that gambling money tends to go into "enterprises in which large amounts of cash are handled or which have had black-market profiteering potentialities, such as hotels, restaurants, night clubs, meat and provision companies, liquor stores, beer and whisky distributorships, automobile dealerships and distributorships, small steel companies." Even transportation companies, utilities and banks are involved in some cases, it was added.

As to recommendations, the committee suggested a review of immigration laws to see if "certain known, notorious criminals who are citizens" cannot be deported. No names were named. Consideration also was suggested for longer jail sentences for narcotics violators.

Tougher income-tax regulations were suggested to put an end to tax returns by racketeers which "report huge sums of money in cash income and disbursements without any specification or supporting detail in their books or records." The committee has examined tax returns and knows whereof it speaks.

It suggested that those who make money illegally—under state laws—should have to give the Federal tax collector an additional year-end statement "showing particularly any increase or decrease in net worth."

The committee put in a plug for the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines, due for House consideration shortly. But it said it was not ready to make a recommendation on the bill to ban prohibition of gambling information across state lines, the so-called "bookie bill."

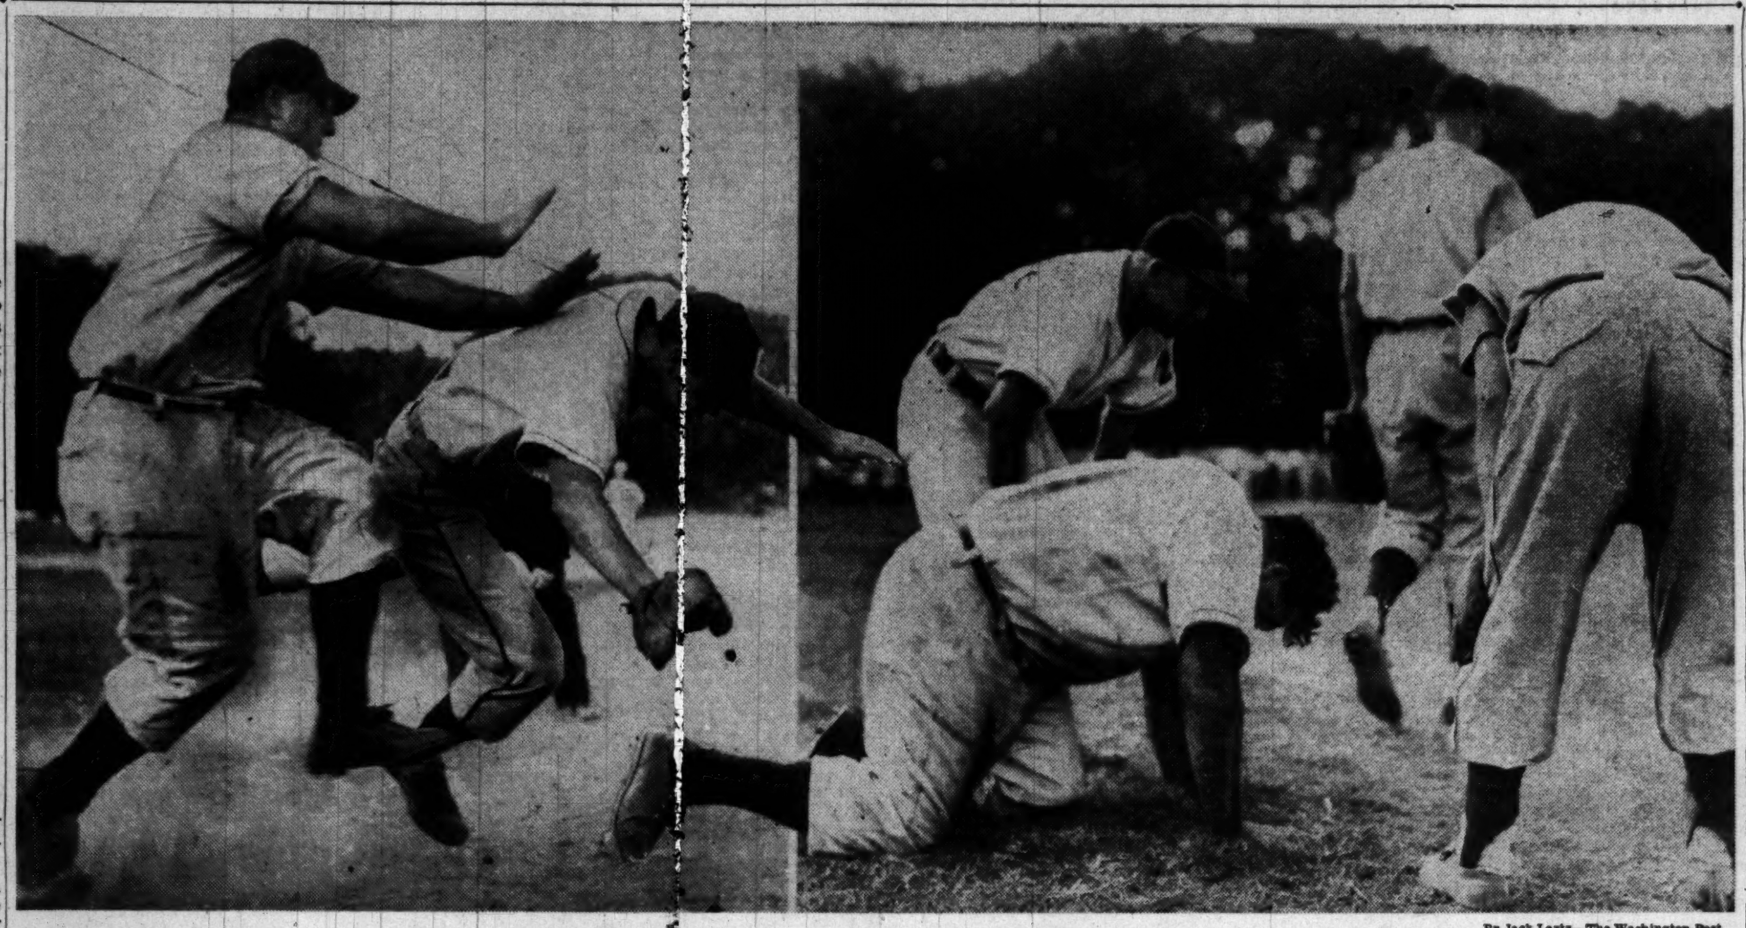
Doerr's Towering Smash in Tenth Sends Nats Down, 7-6; DiMaggio Returns to Lineup, Clouts Game-Winning Homer



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

His Drive In 9th Noses Out A's and Brissie, 3-2

Philadelphia, Aug. 18 (AP).—Joe Di Maggio celebrated his return to New York's lineup after a week's spell on the bench because of weak hitting and fielding, by batting the Yankees to a 3-2 victory over Philadelphia tonight.

It was Di Maggio's 22d home run of the season, with one out in the ninth inning, that accounted for Vic Raschi shading southpaw Lou Brissie as both hurlers allowed six hits.

It was Raschi's 15th victory against eight losses.

DiMaggio hit Brissie's first pitch, a 400-foot drive into the upper left center field seats for the winning wallop.

It was DiMaggio's only hit of the game and his first round-tripper since July 30. It also was his first RBI since that date.

Successive doubles by Phil Rizzuto and Yogi Berra got New York off to a 1-0 advantage in the opening inning. Eddie Joost matched the run when he belted Raschi's first pitch for his 15th homerun of the year in the third.

Raschi's wildness led to a run in Philadelphia's seventh as he walked three in a row, with two out, after a double by Mike Guerra.

Berra Turns Poet And Joe DiMaggio Has an Answer

Richmond, Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—A Richmond youngster beamed over the autograph of New York Yankee Catcher Yogi Berra today. He got the Yankee star's signature yesterday in Washington as the Senators downed the Yanks, 2-1. Berra wrote:

"TO JOE DIMAGGIO:

"Roses are red. Violets are blue.

"Ted Williams can hit. Why can't you?"

YOGI BERRA.

Robertson's 2 Homers And Triple Not Enough

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Boston, Aug. 18.—Bobby Doerr sent 21,546 Fenway Park fans home happy tonight when he lifted a towering home run into the left field screen in the tenth inning to give the Boston Red Sox a 7-6 victory over Washington.

Also in the picture were two home runs and a triple by the Nats' Sherry Robertson, three great throws by Centerfielder Gil Coan, and some mighty fine relief pitching by Elmer Singleton, who worked the last six innings.

Rookie Al Sima started for the Nats and gave the Red Sox a 6-1 lead before he was removed in the fourth.

Robertson tripled and scored the first Washington run, swatted a three-run homer in the sixth, and a two-run circuit smash in the eighth that tied the score and sent the game into extra innings.

Great Throwing by Coan

Coan gave a remarkable throwing exhibition by cutting off two runs at the plate, and whipping out another Red Socker trying to stretch a single into a double.

Coan's first throw came in the last half of the ninth after the Sox loaded the bases with nobody out. Secondbaseman Cass Michaels picked up Billy Goodman's grounder and forced Pinch-Runner Mickey McDermott at the plate for one out.

Slugger Vern Stephens then hoisted a 300-foot fly to center as fleet-footed Dominic DiMaggio tagged up at third, poised to race home with the winning run. Coan caught the fly and cut loose with a sensational strike that nailed the Little Professor by a split second.

Littlefield's First Victory

Young Dick Littlefield, called in to pitch the Red Sox ninth after Starter Joe Dobson was taken out for Pinch-Runner McDermott, was credited with his first major league victory. It was Boston's sixth straight triumph.

Singleton, nicked for five hits, including Doerr's 21st homer, in the last six innings, dropped his second game, a heartbreaker, against one win.

The jinx that has been preying on Washington firstbaseman during the last week struck again in the ninth when Irv Noren, subbing for injured Mickey Vernon and Sam Mele, was hit in the right arm by a Littlefield pitch.

Noren had to be taken out, and Mele, not yet fully recovered from a jammed elbow, took over. Noren's injury was believed to be more painful than serious.

DiMaggio First to Score

Boston took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Dom DiMaggio and Johnny Pesky, and Billy Goodman's fielder's choice. The Nats tied it in their second inning on Robertson's triple and Ed Stewart's double.

The Sox finished off Sima in the third with five runs. DiMaggio, Pesky and Goodman singled for the first one. Doerr walked, and former Nat Clyde Vollmer singled across two more. When Coan mishandled Vollmer's hit, a fourth run also scored.

Matt Batts drove in No. 5 with a single to center, but he was thrown out at second on Coan's first fine peg.

Washington sliced its deficit to 6-4 in the sixth on singles by Coan and Noren and Robertson's first homer of the year which sailed 400 feet into the right-field bull-pen.

Doerr put Noren on in the eighth with an error, and Robertson picked on Dobson's first pitch, sending it into the bullpen again in right to tie it up at 6-6, but Doerr untied the knot in the tenth.

IN SHORT—Chico Marrero (5-7) will start for the Nats against Boston's Mel Parnell (10-8) in tomorrow afternoon's game . . . Billy Goodman's three hits tonight boosted his average to .354 and he took over the league lead from Detroit's George Kell . . . slugging Walt Dropo, beaned by Philadelphia's Hank Wyse last Tuesday, worked out today, and is expected back in Boston's lineup Sunday . . . in pregame batting practice tonight, Stephens hit 11 straight pitches either against Fenway's short leftfield fence or in to the screen above it. He went hitless in five trips during the game, batting into two double plays.

For a Kid Like Permane

Plenty of Sentiment Still Grips the Turf

By Red Smith

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 18 (NYHT).—The preliminary, or solid food stage of the annual Turf Writers' dinner was finished and Nelson (Imported) Dunstan had distributed hardware to assorted citizens accused of "doing the most for the American turf in 1949."

The New York Turf Writers' Association is a reactionary body that never has adopted the proposal of Francis Dunne, the great steward who believes the plaques should be awarded to citizens for whom the American turf did the most in 1939. "This country," Mr. Dunne argues "is crawling with obscure millionaires that nobody would ever hear of if they didn't own some fast horse that made 'em famous."

RED SMITH

Anyway, Mr. Dunstan had presented baubles to Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane and Willie Dupont and John Gaver and then he asked Ted Atkinson to accept an award for Gordon Glisson, the kid who came rushing out of nowhere a year ago to become the Nation's champion rider. Glisson couldn't be present because his kid brother was killed riding a race in California a few days ago, and Atkinson told the crowd that in happier circumstances he'd be proud to represent Gordon on an occasion like this, because Glisson was "the finest little gentleman on the turf."

It was interesting that in the applause which followed, those who clapped hardest were Glisson's associates of the jockey rooms, the little guys who are out there on the track battling with him every day at the risk of their own lives, and his.

AT ONE TABLE A LITTLE blond kid was beating his small palms loudly. Bobby Permane, liiking sharp as a fishwife's tongue in his white dinner jacket, was having a big time. The boy was terribly injured in a fall at Gulfstream Park in March, 1949, and now, after eight months in a hospital and nine operations, he was so obviously graeful to be back where he belongs, riding and winning and having fun with the mob.

Now Mr. Dunstan told of a day at Garden State Park when a rider whom he'd never seen before caught his eye and Ed Brown, the New Jersey steward told him "He's a new kid who's got everything except confidence. If he ever gets that he'll be a wonder."

Sometime later, Mr. Dunstan said, the new kid had a day in Florida when he won four races, followed by three winners the next day, and now confidence came to him and he was as good as jockeys can get. Permane had been getting ready to applaud for somebody else but at this point he began to suspect what the speaker was getting at, and he glanced around his table looking for the tip-off in somebody else's eyes. He found everybody at the table watching him.

Mr. Dunstan went on to tell of Bobby Permane's great success, his accident, and his courage in the long months afterward. Bobby, thinking he was finished, stood up and made an embarrassed little bow but scarcely anybody saw him and he sat down again as the toastmaster continued. Mr. Dunstan said that Gene Ward, of the Daily News had proposed a special award for Bobby, saying "We all admire him so much, why don't we let him know it?" And now if Bobby Permane would come to the microphone——

Bobby stood up and caught Gene Ward's sleeve and pleaded, "Will you come up with me?" He was like a scared child He went up, towing Ward and stammered his thanks. Around the room, there was a good deal of crying.

PERMANE IS ONE of those kids nobody could help liking, a sweet little guy out of Lou Little's home town, Leominister, Mass.

Earlier in the evening he'd been chatting about the life of a jockey, with its swiftly changing fortunes.

Once he had a losing streak of 127 consecutive races, an almost unbelievable slump for a first class rider. He said he hadn't let it bother him, hadn't even counted his defeats as the total mounted.

"I didn't have to count," he said. "Those guys on the rail, they counted for me. 'That's 120 you bum,' they'd say. 'Now it's 121, Permane.'" He laughed. "They have to remind you. You felt bad enough about it by yourself, but they have to keep digging at you.

He said there was no accounting for riders' slumps, any more than you could explain the batting slumps of great hitters.

"When you're winning," he said, "it's the same way. You can't do anything wrong. You make mistakes, and they don't matter. You win with good horses and you win with bums. When I had five winners a day three days in a row in Florida, why was it?

"It was because horses that always stopped didn't stop. Horses that always were getting left at the post would break on the bell. I remember I'd won five for two days and four on the third day and in the last race I had a horse named Belfry Chimes that was known for not being able to stand up in the mud.

"We were in the gate and one of those terrific Florida rainstorms broke, like the one we had here the other day. There I was on this horse that couldn't even stand up in mud, and I thought, 'There goes my winner. There goes my last chance to make it three days in a row.'

"So the bell rang and Belfry Chimes ran off through that mud and they never saw which way she went."

Clark's 66 Ties Heafner In Eastern

By George Bowen

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—Clayton Heafner, the North Carolina golfer with a bulging waistline, slowed down today and lean Jimmie Clark pulled up even with him at the half-way mark of the Eastern Open.

Clark stroked a sizzling 66 to tie Heafner for 36 holes at 137, seven better than par. Heafner, who set a Mount Pleasant course record of 65 yesterday, couldn't beat par 72 on his second round.

A stroke behind the two leaders in the 72-hole tourney were Henry Ransom, the 39-year-old Texan, and Johnny Palmer of Baden, N. C.

Ransom equalled Heafner's record of 65 to post behind his opening 73. Palmer stayed steady at 69 for both rounds, topping it off with a 20-foot putt birdie on the 18th.

Clark, a 29-year-old newcomer to the money golf circuit from Huntington Beach, Calif., posted his 66 behind a 71.

Fred Haas, jr., of Claremont, Calif., stayed within two strokes of the pace-setters with 139 on rounds of 69 and 70. Another stroke back is Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.

Castiglia Gets a Surprise . . .

Jim Castiglia, 220-pound former Georgetown U. and Redskin fullback, apparently got his sports mixed up last night while playing for the Heurich Brewers. On a close play at first base in the fifth inning of a game on the Ellipse against Cameo, Jim charged into First Baseman Leech, 160-pounder, and was called safe. But when the action finished it was Castiglia, not Leech, who lay dazed on the ground. Heurich Manager Pepco Barry and Pitcher Odie Printz (back to camera) console Castiglia as Leech walks away from them unharmed. Heurich won, 7-3. (Story on Page 10.)

Williams Hits 1 Over Fence

Manchester, Maine, Aug. 18 (AP).—Ted Williams, disabled Boston Red Sox slugger, said today he has hit a ball "over the fence" in Boston practice despite his injured elbow.

Williams flew into Maine today for some fishing.

"And it felt wonderful,' added Williams as he told of the long distance belt.

The home run king conceded he had been doing a little practising "on my own."

Dr. J. H. Shortell, surgeon who operated on Williams' elbow, added, "and he has been rowing a boat on his own, too." Williams lunched with Dr. Shortell at the latter's summer home here. He looked paler than when he was playing ball every day.

"The doctor and I made an agreement," said Williams, "that I wouldn't start anything until he said I'm ready. But I think I'll be in there again this season."

Dr. Shortell's comment was only that "we can tell better in two or three weeks."

Giants' Hearn Halts Phils Again, 7 to 4

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Big Jim Hearn turned in another impressive performance tonight as he pitched the New York Giants to a 7-4 victory over the first place Philadelphia Phils.

Hearn permitted only five hits but two were homers by Andy Seminick and Willie Jones. The Giants banged out nine safeties including homers by Hank Thompson and Whitey Lockman.

For Hearn this was his fifth victory in six starts since coming to the Giants and his second in a week over the Phils. He blanked them, 2-0, last Sunday. The Cardinal castoff has never been beaten by the Quaker City club, holding a 7-0 lifetime record over the Phils.

Sells Million-Dollar Business for It

49ers' Morabito Just Loves Football

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO, AUG. 18.—Tony Morabito is an upset in more ways than one.

First, he was the only young athlete in San Francisco's heavily populated Italian district who as a kid didn't dream of growing up and playing baseball for the New York Yankees.

Second, and more important to Tony today, he's a successful pro football owner.

Baseball, that was all right for the DiMaggios, the Crosettis and the Lazzeris, but not for Tony. Football was his game.

As a player, he was no sensation. He played a little halfback for St. Ignatius High School, but his career was halted by a shoulder injury as a freshman at Santa Clara.

But Tony was determined to get into football some way. To take his mind off of football, he went into the thriving lumber business here. Tony's firm stored and shipped lumber for the smaller mills. Business was good, and World War II, made it even better. Tony made a lot of money.

But Tony still had football on his mind. He had a beautiful wife, two lovely 'teen aged daughters and a beautiful home in fashionable San Mateo, a suburb of San Francisco. But Tony still wasn't happy. He wanted to get into football some way.

Today, he's happy, happier than he's ever been in his 43 years. He's in football—as co-owner of the San Francisco 49ers. Business is so good the 49ers have 22 ticket offices plus a super-plush suite of

Three Jockeys Injured in Spectacular Spill at Bel Air Track

AT BEL AIR,

DEAR FOLKS:

A remarkable record has been hung up by Mrs. G. A. Saportas, jr., as a trainer. She has saddled six horses here with five winning and the other second. Jockey Jimmy Baird, leading rider at the meeting, has two winners to go to make it 100 for the year. He came here after performing 80 days in Ohio and riding a dozen winners. Max Pearson, of Washington is Baird's agent. The turf course race listed for the week-end program did not fill and was called off. By the way, the jockeys wisely lengthen their stirrups when riding on the grass. Gives them better control at the turns. See you on the rail—BILL.

Lacy Breaks Shoulder In 4th Race Fall

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Aug. 18.—Three jockeys were injured in a spectacular spill that marked the fourth race here today.

Apprentice Lee Lacy of Baltimore was most seriously hurt, suffering a fractured right shoulder. Apprentice Pat Cocco of Brooklyn, will be X-rayed for a possible fractured collar bone while Jockey John C. Lauer of Baltimore escaped with face lacerations.

Three horses fell in the speed jam that developed at the clubhouse turn, soon after the start of the test of 6½ furlongs.

The stewards placed the major blame on Jockey Lamar Bauer, of Havre de Grace, Md., who rode Dick Pending's Silver Kite far back in the field. Bauer was suspended for the remainder of the present meeting.

Hamlet, with Bauer up, went down first and Marine Victory, ridden by Lacy and Miss Tess, with Cocco up, stumbled and fell over Hamlet.

W. R. Roberts' Irish Rogue, making his first start of the year, turned up as the winner at a $23.80 mutuel. Mrs. A. Machise's Flash-Up was second with Mrs. R. T. Taylor's Dridas third in the field of ten. The winner, handled by Jockey F. Cisneros, was clocked in 1:22 2/5.

The day's feature, the Fallston, proved a romp for A. T. Allen's Love Me Now, in the role of a $5 favorite. The son of Menow won by five lengths under the handling of Apprentice A. Russo. E. F. Brining's Mamaloi was second with Mrs. Leona M. Carver's Eagle Speed third. Love Me Now was clocked in 1:39 3/5 for the mile over a lightning fast track.

Marshall Denies Paying $3000 to Eddie LeBaron

Los Angeles, Aug. 18.—The Washington Redskins today denied that Eddie LeBaron was receiving a $3000 bonus to play against the San Francisco 49ers in San Francisco Sunday.

LeBaron, on loan from the Marines, plays his final game of civilian football Sunday. He leaves for Quantico to become an officer candidate and quarterback for the Leatherneck footballers next week.

Coach Herman Ball and his squad will fly to San Francisco tomorrow morning for the 49ers game which starts at 5:30 p. m. Washington time. A crowd of 55,000 is expected.

Brewers Near Title With 7-3 Victory

The Heurich Brewers defeated Cameo, 7-3, yesterday on the Ellipse and took over first place in The Washington Post-Industrial League by a one-game margin.

The Brewers have won nine games and lost two while the Furniture men have an 8-3 record. The teams meet again Monday at 5:30 p.m. on the West Ellipse in the last game of the season.

Should Heurich win Monday's game, the Industrial League season will be over.

Jerry Zanelotti's single with the bases loaded in the eighth inning broke a 3-3 tie and sent Heurich out in front, 5-3. The Brewers scored two more runs in the same inning to sew up the contest.

Bill Jeffries hit a home run for Cameo in the first inning. Odie Printz was the winning pitcher, holding Cameo to eight hits, and George Jarboe was charged with the loss.

Miles Regatta Starts Today

St. Michaels, Md., Aug. 18 (AP).—The Miles River Yacht Club tomorrow stages its twenty-ninth annual power boat regatta, and it's looking for a record field in the 24-event show.

This is the first year the club has held separate regattas for power and sailboats. Two weeks ago its sailing races attracted 202 entries, the greatest number in history.

Some 5000 fans are expected for the two-day powerboat competition. About 50 boats are expected to answer the starter's gun.

Already received are entries from New York, New Jersey, Florida, Texas, North Carolina, Delaware, Ohio and Maryland.

With the exception of tomorrow's 10-mile free-for-all, all boats will be raced two laps around the 2½-mile Miles River course.

An extra feature this year is a 48-cubic-inch runabout affair for ladies only. Five entries are assured and another seven are probable for the race, which is carded for 4:30 p. m. Sunday.

Tony Morabito, 49ers Owner, Sells Business for Football

Reinhart, present basketball mentor at George Washington U., had Buddy Young, Charlie O'Rourke, Bruiser Kinard, Paul Christman, Danny Fortmann, Special Delivery Jones and a slew of others. Crazy Legs Hirsch was driving 'em crazy down at El Toro for the Marines.

"Coast people had read about these players in the Midwest, but only seldom did they get to see them play, these stars," Tony said. "There's where the idea struck us for pro football on the Coast.

Tony rounded up a few friends and, presto, they were in business. He chose as his coach Buck Shaw, the silver-haired former Notre Damer who was an assistant coach at Santa Clara when Tony tried to make the team.

"And next we needed a star, a real star," he added. "So we got Frankie Albert, who became an idol in the Bay area in 1940 when he took Stanford to the Rose Bowl. Little by little we got other players, many of whom the people had seen play here with the service teams. That did it for us."

Today the San Francisco 49ers—and the team certainly has the most exciting nickname in football—is on the road to making a mint for Tony and his brother Vic.

And it isn't easy. The box-office competition out this way is fierce. There's Santa Clara, San Francisco, St. Mary's, Stanford and the University of California all in a 28-mile radius. On the weekend of September 22, for instance, the weekend the 49ers open their National League season, Bay area fans have the following games to choose from:

1. St. Mary's vs. College of Pacific on Friday night at Kezar Stadium.

2. Stanford vs. San Jose State at Palo Alto, 28 miles away, on Saturday.

3. California vs. Santa Clara at Berkeley, just across the bridge, on Saturday.

4. Tulsa vs. San Francisco U., Saturday night, at Kezar.

5. 49ers vs. Chicago Bears at Kezar Stadium on Sunday.

"We aren't worried playing the Bears and I know California isn't worried about attendance either," Morabito smiled. "Over there they don't have to worry. It's a State school and if they run a little short they just send a wire down to the capital at Sacramento and asked for more money. And get it. That's the ideal setup."

Although Sunday will be the first time the two teams have ever played, the 49ers have already had an experience with the Redskins. Both clubs wanted Eddie LeBaron, who is a 14-karat idol in this country.

"We were all set to claim him as our tenth choice," Tony explained. "But the Redskins, who were four places above us on the draft list, got him first."

So, to make amends, the 49ers claimed Bob Celeri, California quarterback who ran 1-2 with LeBaron in the popularity poll here.

"But maybe we got the best of Marshall after all," Tony chuckled. "The Marines get LeBaron Monday, but we've still got Celeri."

Health Study Shows Preventive Measures Can Cut Sick Leaves

SICK LEAVE: It can be reduced in Government by a preventive health program.

This is the conclusion of the Public Health Service following an experimental study among 3425 Federal employes in Denver, Colo. These are PHS findings:

Sick leave was reduced an average of 6 hours annually per employe by a preventive program;

One-half of the employes were found to make three-fourths of the requests for sick leave and used four-fifths of the total sick leave;

Women employes requested and took more sick leave than men, and,

Men in top-bracket jobs used less sick leave than men in the lower ranks, but the amount of sick leave taken by women was about the same, irrespective of grades.

Perhaps the one finding most appealing to Congress is this—that a preventive program can be made to pay for itself. The PHS program at Denver cost $38,000, but an estimated $32,880 was saved by reduced sick leave. But PHS is of the firm opinion that gradually increasing savings could be made and the sick leave rate lowered by working with those employes who take more than their share of the leave.

LIBRARY: The Library of Congress has instituted its own system of temporary indefinite appointments. When a library employe leaves to enter the military service, his replacement will be given an indefinite appointment and let out when the fighting is over.

JOBS: The State Department has openings for Grade 3 and 4 clerk-stenographers here. No status required. Get full details from Mrs. Karruth, Room 111, Walker-Johnson Building, 1734 New York Ave. N.W.

RETIREMENT: The full Senate Postoffice & Civil Service Committee yesterday lowered the boom on the bill exempting Civil Service pension from Federal income taxes. It referred the bill to the Senate Finance Committee which is expected to kill it. The committee also:

Okayed the bill to bring temporary Capitol Hill employes with a year or more of service under the retirement system; ordered a further study of the bill to bring those employes under the retirement system who have five or more years of service and who are paid in whole or in part from Federal funds, and killed for this session the bill to allow employes to retire who are laid off after 20 years of service.

PAYLESS PLAN: Like the agencies, the Civil Service Commission is faced with a sharp lay-off of employes under the 10 percent cut voted by the Senate.

But the commission also must increase its investigative and loyalty staffs in order to check the thousands of new employes being hired by the defense agencies. It will ask Congress for a deficiency appropriation.

Pending final congressional action, the commission is looking into the possibility of requesting its employees to take a day off without pay every two weeks. Officials, however, are most reluctant to advocate the plan as it would amount to a pay cut, and a pay cut in a time of rising prices would be most unpopular.

CREDIT: You can credit Rep. Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) for inspiring yesterday's order by General Services Administration that freezes the sale of surplus Government property.

The hard-hitting Texan, a ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, suggested such a freeze order several weeks ago. In addition, he asked Maritime to issue a similar order on the sale of its surplus ships.

Thomas explained that the cost of reproducing items the Government was selling at bargain prices would be several times their selling prices. He urged both GSA and Maritime to channel the maximum amounts of surplus goods to defense needs.

$500 Bond Set by Court In All D. C. Sex Cases

Judges Also Decree Collateral Cannot Be Forfeited at Precinct Stations

The Police Department yesterday was ordered to require minimum collateral of $500 bond or $300 cash from all persons charged with sex offenses.

The order, issued by the judges of the Municipal Court, also decreed that collateral can no longer be forfeited at the precincts in any case involving a sex offense.

The order is to become effective Monday, August 21.

On disorderly conduct charges at present, a person can post $25 cash collateral and forfeit this collateral rather than appear in court.

The present maximum sentence on disorderly conduct charges is a $25 fine or 30 days in jail. However, it is expected that the Municipal Court judges will recommend that this maximum be increased by legislation.

Chief Judge George P. Barse made the order public late yesterday, two days after Judge Ellen K. Raedy revealed that she had propoed the new policy at a judges' conference Wednesday night.

Credit Firm Goes Clear in License Case

The criminal case against the Columbia Credit Co., 2221 14th st. nw., accused of charging more than 6 percent interest on a secured loan without a license, was dismissed in Municipal Court yesterday.

Judge Milton S. Kronheim, jr., tossed out the case because he said he could not tell how much insurance was included in the interest charged by the loan concern.

The company claimed that part of the interest charges included insurance on the life of the borrower.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King said that the company charged as high as 28 percent interest. Persons borrowing money, King said, never received any insurance policies.

The District has refused to renew the company's insurance license, and this refusal has been upheld by District Court Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

The Government then prosecuted the company for doing business without a license. It was this action that Judge Kronheim stopped yesterday.

Rhode Islander Victor in Sesqui March Contest

A march composed by a Rhode Island public school music instructor has been selected from 85 entries as the "Sesquicentennial March," theme song of Washington's 150th anniversary celebration.

Alfred P. Zambarano of Cranston, R. I., is the winner of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission's nation-wide contest.

Besides having his march played during the Sesquicentennial programs, Zambarano will have the piece published by Carl Fischer, Inc.,

Judges were Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, former director of the U. S. Army Band; Maj. William Santelmann, director of the U. S. Marine Corps Band; First Lieut. Samuel F. Loboda, assistant director of the Army Band; Chief Warrant Officer Frank Weirauch, commander of the U. S. Air Force Bandsmen's School, and Gustave Reese of Carl Fischer, Inc.

Dr. Smadel Wins Army Award for Civilian Service

The Army's Exceptional Civilian Service award, tenth of its kind to be bestowed, was presented yesterday to Dr. Joseph E. Smadel, of 9711 Lawndale dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, made the presentation at the Post Theater of the Army Medical Center here.

Dr. Smadel was chosen for the honor for his "exceptional performance of duty as scientific director of the department of virus and Richettsial diseases, Army Medical Center's Research and Graduate School." His work included successful research into the cause and cure of scrub typhus, typhoid fever and other Rickettsial diseases.

By Tom Keller—The Washington Post

MISSED EMERGENCY LANDING—All that remains of an Air Force plane is scattered over a tobacco patch, just 100 yards in the rear of a home at 7240 Brinkley rd., Clinton, Md. Flames engulfed the plane after it crashed as it headed for an emergency landing at Andrews Air Force Base. Pilot and crew chief were killed and a passenger seriously injured. The survivor said two engines caught fire. (Story on Page 1)

Arlington Boy Who Ran Into Auto Dies

Head Injuries Fatal To William Paxton, 7; 3 Hurt in Road Crash

A seven-year-old Arlington boy who didn't wait for the traffic light to turn after he pushed its control button, died of head injuries in Arlington Hospital last night.

William

The lad, William Eugene Paxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Paxton, of 2521 Lee hgway, ran into the side of a moving automobile on the highway at Cleveland st., Arlington, Thursday night, police said.

A pedestrian button at the intersection permits walkers to stop traffic to cross the highway. But the control has a waiting interval to allow automobiles already near the intersection to pass, police said.

Police said the boy apparently pressed the button and darted across the street, running into a passing automobile driven by Mary E. Rector, 20, of McLean, Va. No charges were placed against the driver.

William is one of four Paxton children, whose father operates the Paxton Storage Co., 327 S. Fairfax st., Alexandria. His sisters and a brother include Sandra Kay, 6; Freddy, 4, and Karen Lee, 8-months old.

In Prince Georges County three persons were injured early yesterday in an accident which jammed Baltimore-Washington blvd. traffic at College Park for nearly three hours.

Mrs. Amy Ervin, 48, of Beltsville, passenger in an auto which was rammed in the rear by a trailer truck, was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital with head cuts. Her husband, Charles, 48, and Wiliam R. Gormley, 23, of Oak Lawn, Md., driver of the car in which they were riding, were released after treatment for minor injuries.

Acalotti Parole Decision Put Off

The Parole Board yesterday postponed decision on whether to grant parole to Attilio Acalotti, 42, the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle" and gambler here.

Acalotti is serving eight to 24 months in Lorton Reformatory for threatening a Government witness in his gambling trial and for numbers lottery complicity.

Board Chairman Hugh F. Rivers said that before reaching a decision, the views of an absent member of the board will be obtained.

Welcome Surprise

Great Dane More Lamb Than Lion

A 185-pound Great Dane, full of meat cakes and shredded wheat, early yesterday morning stood off a squad of policemen trying to serve a warrant on his mistress, Mrs. Marjorie Hughes, 52, of 1222 Allison st., nw.

Buddy's bark turned out to be a lot worse than his bite, but before this was discovered, the police department committed four privates, a sergeant, and Lieut. George (Two-Gun) Cooper to the assault.

Mrs. Hughes was wanted on three counts of unpaid board bills, involving her visits to the Lee House, and the Carlton and Roger Smith hotels.

She pleaded guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to the charges totaling $655, and her case was referred to the probation office for sentencing September 8.

When the officers arrived to serve the attachment, they heard ominous rumblings but were told Mrs. Hughes was not in. When they tried to enter, they were informed by a voice that there was a large dog inside. And there was some kind of large dog there, Buddy. "He looked like the side of a mountain," Twelfth Precinct Pvt. Arthur Sweeney said.

Cooper was called as reinforcement. He got up his nerve and entered. Buddy attacked, but with friendship, not malice. The misunderstanding was over and the cops accepted, gingerly, Buddy's tongue-warming.

Fairfax School Population Rises by 11,000

Census Covers Last 5 Years, Cites Actual And Potential Pupils

The Fairfax County school population—potential and actual—has increased by more than 11,000 within the past five years.

W. T. Woodson, county school superintendent, said yesterday that the bulk of the increase is due to the influx of young married couples in the county. There was an increase of 6417 in children of pre-school age.

In a 10-year period, Fairfax County's child population between the ages on 1 and 19 years has increased well over 100 percent, from 12,035 to 28,540. In 1945, there were 17,314 children in that age bracket in the county, according to the new school census.

The census showed an increase of 11,366 in white children between the ages of 1 to 19 during the five-year period, and a decrease of 170 Negro children. The net increase was 11,196.

Largest increase is among the 1 year old, of 1949. Only age group to show a decrease during the period was the 19-year-olds, who are 16 fewer in 1950 than they were in 1945.

For the new school year, which begins September 5, Woodson said there still are "10 or 12" vacancies in primary grades. This year's beginning teacher complement is much more satisfactory from a numercial standpoint than it has been in recent years, he said.

From St. Elizabeths

Indian, 27, Confined 16 Years, Freed

A 27-year-old Alaskan Indian was released from St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday, after spending the last 16 years in insane asylums.

Gilford John Kriska was found insane by an Alaskan jury in July, 1934, when he was only 11.

The boy spent the next 11 years in an Oregon mental institution, escaping once in an unsuccessful attempt to enlist in the Army. He arrived at St. Elizabeth's in January, 1945, as a ward of the Secretary of the Interior.

Kriska

The Indian was freed by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran on a writ of habeas corpus after his release was recommended by the Commission on Mental Health.

The commission reported that the staff of Saint Elizabeths believes Kriska requires constant care and supervision in the hospital, that he is "a social," "easily aroused," and that his conduct is frequently "hyperactive."

Nevertheless, the commission reported it believes Kriska to be a "constitutional psychopath, at present without a psychosis."

"Further incidents of asocial conduct may be expected," the commission report said, "wherever he may be placed, but it is believed that he would have a better opportunity of adjusting were he among members of his own race."

In his petition for a writ of habeas corpus, Kriska's lawyer, Louis Lebowitz, said Kriska's mother expected her son to be sent to the United States to be educated, when he was 11. Instead, Lebowitz charged, a jury of six Indians was convened and found the child insane.

When Kriska escaped from the Oregon institution to join the Army, his IQ was said to be 10 points higher than average, but he could produce no birth certificate. When he returned to the institution to get a certificate, he was arrested and put in solitary confinement, Lebowitz charged.

Dr. Samuel A. Silk of Saint Elizabeths said in an affidavit that Kriska once escaped from there and "has made serious assaults on patients and attendants."

Area Dairies' Dollar Share Near U. S. Peak

Most Local Producers Getting Better Prices Than in 102 Cities

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Milk producers in the Washington area get a larger proportion of each retail dollar spent for milk than producers in nearly any other area in the country.

The August milk report of the Agriculture Department also reveals that local milk farmers, most of them members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, get a higher price than the farmers in 102 other city milksheds. The price paid here, however, is slightly lower than in 10 other city markets.

Out of the 21 cents a quart that Washington area consumers pay for milk delivered to their doors, the milk farmer gets 12.2 cents, and the handler only 8.8 cents.

In Chicago, for example, where the delivered price is 21½ cents (half a cent more than here) the farmer gets only 7.9 cents a quart. The spread between farmer and user is 13.6 cents.

Here are some comparisons:

City	Farmer price	City price	Spread
Washington Area	12.2	21	8.8
Atlanta	11.4	21	9.6
Atlantic City	11.5	23.5	12.5
Chicago	7.9	21.5	13.6
Des Moines	9	18	9
Philadelphia	10.7	20	9.3
Baltimore	11.4	20½	9.1
Los Angeles	9.4	19	9.6
San Francisco	9	19	10

The August report also reveals that out of 113 cities, only 24 have higher retail milk prices than Washington. Most of these are cities like Miami, Savannah, etc., which are far removed from a major milk producing area. Washington however, is surrounded by one of the most productive milk sheds in the country.

Fourteen cities have the same price as Washington. 75 have lower prices.

"Retail prices for standard milk," the Bureau of Agricultural Economics states, "delivered to homes in 24 cities in August, averaged 19.8 cents a quart. (This is 1.2 cents lower than Washington.) This average price was three-tenths of a cent higher than in July but three-tenths of a cent lower than in August last year."

The average price dealers paid for milk was $4.51. In Washington it was $5.68. "This average price," BAE said, "was 13 cents per hundredweight higher than July but 15 cents lower than in August last year."

About one market in every three has raised prices since July, the report said.

Lane Uses Yacht at Expense Of Public, Mahoney Charges

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—George P. Mahoney today said the State Yacht Potomac costs $60,000 and its only use is as luxury pleasure craft for Governor Lane.

Lane's campaign manager called Mahoney a "gossip-mongering old fishwife."

Both he and Mahoney made reference to Mahoney's arrest on a disorderly conduct charge 27 years ago.

Mahoney charged that the $60,000 annual cost of the Potomac is hidden in the budget of the Tidewater Fisheries Department.

"With that money," Mahoney said, "the department could plant nearly 400,000 bushels of shells on the depleted oyster bar of the bay."

The exchange about Mahoney's arrest for disorderly conduct came after Mahoney had declared at a rally:

"That man (Lane) is not fit to hold office. I won't embarrass him or the State of Maryland by telling you why. Let's just say that he's 'not available' most of the time."

The reply from the Lane camp was issued by Robert B. Ennis, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee and campaign manager for the Lane-Tawes-Hammond ticket in the primary next month.

"Mr. Mahoney," Ennis said, "presented himself in his true character—a gossip-mongering old fishwife, mouthing innuendo and insinuation in a malicious effort to destroy reputations and protect himself from his own conscience. "Why doesn't he come out like a man and say what he means?"

Mahoney acknowledged at the rally that he had been arrested in 1923 at a poolroom—"Like any other red-blooded American boy."

"Mahoney," Ennis said, "must have been afraid someone would tell all. He glossed it over with the 'poor boy' angle.

"Was he afraid to tell from whose poolroom he was taken to the station house? Was it his own?"

The old police docket shows a George Mahoney was arrested in 1923 along with 14 others at a pool hall and fined $1 and costs for disorderly conduct.

Mayor Mills Quits Senatorial Contest

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 18 (AP).—Mayor Herman L. Mills tonight withdrew as a candidate for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate.

This leaves two Republican candidates in the field bidding for the seat now held by Democratic Senator Tydings, campaigning for his fifth term in Congress. They are D. John Markey of Frederick County and John M. Butler, a Baltimore attorney.

Scally Drops Out Of Senatorial Race

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—Lawrence B. Scally, Baltimore attorney, withdrew from the race today and left Senator Tydings with only two rivals in the quest for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate next month.

Scally withdrew in favor of one of these rivals, John A. Meyer, former Representative from the Fourth Congressional District.

The other challenger of the veteran Senator is Hugh J. Monaghan, 2d, of Baltimore.

Cooler Weather Is Forecast After Hottest Day of Week

The mercury rose to 88 yesterday, hottest in a week. But for the weekend it looks as pleasant as a lime ice, temperatures in the low 80s being forecast.

We may get some rain today.

The five-day period beginning today should average two or four degrees below normal, said Forecaster Ernest Rampey. Normals are 83 high and 65 low.

Today it's "highest in the low 80s and mostly cloudy, with chance of showers." Sunday is scheduled to be a little warmer, Monday or Tuesday cooler. Little or no rain is due during the five days other than the chance of showers today.

Irate Hornets Overwhelmed By Brave But Nervous Police

Things were really buzzing yesterday in front of 3150 19th st. nw., until Police Pvts. Ernest G. McClanahan and John P. Gerardi got on the job.

Their job was to get rid of a hornets' nest in a maple tree, and in a few minutes they were able to report "mission accomplished."

Called to the scene, McClanahan tried to get some advice from police headquarters.

"How do you get a hornets' nest out of a tree?" he querried.

"That's your mystery," came the reply.

McClanahan commandeered a clothespole and poked at the hornets nest. Its inmates began zooming in a series of dry runs but they did not bomb. At a safe distance was Gerardi, ready with a garden hose to spray any "bomber" that wanted McClanahan as his target.

Then, McClanahan knocked down the nest and burned it with a kerosene soaked rag. The only casualties were the hornet population, estimated as between 100 and 500.

The most relieved person was Mrs. John Deinzer, in front of whose home the nest was. She had wanted to use the clothespole herself, but her husband said it was a job for more experienced hands.

"Anyhow," she said, "the police did a wonderful job."

City May Get $500,000 More for Welfare Aid

Bill Before Truman Will Make Possible Restoration of Part Of Assistance Cut

Funds available to the District Welfare Department for public assistance payments this fiscal year will be increased by nearly $500,000 if President Truman signs the new social security bill.

Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant District welfare director, said the increased Federal aid should make possible restoration after January 1 of most of the 20 percent cut made in assistance payments during the past year.

Clapp said the bill approved by Congress Thursday would make available to the District between $400,000 and $500,000 for the fiscal year that began July 1. No funds would be available until October, however, he said. Total assistance funds, District and Federal, available to the department without the increase, amount to $4,588,000, Clapp said.

The welfare department bases its payments on the minimum considered necessary to exist on at 1946 prices, Clapp said. Lack of funds forced three cuts last year amounting to a total of 20 percent. That means public assistance cases are receiving 80 percent of what Government experts calculated was the minimum required for existence at 1946 living costs. The added Federal aid should make it possible to increase payments to 95 or 100 percent of the 1946 standards, Clapp said.

The new act would also decrease District old-age payments to the extent that increased Social Security payments make old persons ineligible for welfare help, Clapp said.

Crackers Loot Safe of $2900

Police sought a band of safe-crackers yesterday who had punched a hole in the mechanism of a vault at the Peoples Life Insurance Co., 808 I st. nw., and escaped with approximately $2900 in cash.

The burglars apparently used gloves, police said. There were no fingerprints and no tools left on the scene. Officers said they had not found a suspect in the crime, which occurred late Thursday or early yesterday.

Overlooked by the burglars, police said, were 67 envelopes containing cash.

Office manager John L. Logan declined to estimate how much money the envelopes contained other than to say it was "considerable." About half the missing cash represented yesterday's payroll, police reported.

Traffic Tips

6. Stay in line while driving. Weavers are fine in textile plants but a double-distilled menace on highways.

Weaving can get you not only into a head-on smash or a bad sideswipe, but it also is very likely to get you a ticket in a strange town. Keep in the proper lane when making right or left turns, and be sure to signal clearly, in plenty of time.

'Some Folks Don't Understand'

Rare Wallack Antiques Look 'Good as New'

By Norma Lanum

NATHAN N. WALLACK had just shown a friend through his house in Alexandria. The friend paused before leaving, scratched his head. "You know, Wallack, what would really make this place look good. You need to get yourself some antiques."

That friend committed a faux pas to end a'l faux pas, because Mr. Wallack has just spent two and one half years filling his colonial mansion, the Lafayette House, with nothing but authentic early American furnishings, That's right, antiques.

Trouble is, every piece of furniture in the place is in pristine condition and looks brand new. Actually the newest things Mr. Wallack owns are just a little older than 100 years.

"I understand how some folks don't appreciate all the work, knowledge and money that I've had to put into this place," Wallack says, characteristically.

Some People Do Know About Things

"I'VE restored this house for my own pleasure to live in with my family, that's all that matters. Some people just don't know about those things."

Some people, however, do "know about those things." In fact, the Alexandria Association recently gave Mr. Wallack its "award of merit" for his restoration of the house which most "faithfully and well reflects the characteristic traditional architectural style of Alexandria."

Mr. Wallack, a radio and television dealer, has been studying and collecting Colonial furniture —antiques—as long as he can remember. But he never thought of undertaking to restore a Colonial house himself until he spotted the Lafayette House at 301 S. St. Asaph st. in Alexandria.

General Lafayette Also Slept Here

THE house, built in the early 1800's, was turned over to General Lafayette for his residence during a visit to the old river port.

From the time Mr. Wallack bought the house in October, 1947, until just recently, he has been furnishing it with painstaking detail. The furniture, all from the finest early American cabinet makers, is in perfect condition. He bought nothing but the best.

In addition, the pictures on the wall, the draperies and even the door bells, knobs and window glass all date from the early American period of the mansion.

Finding old window glass to replace the new panes that were in the house when he bought it was one of Mr. Wallack's toughest problems.

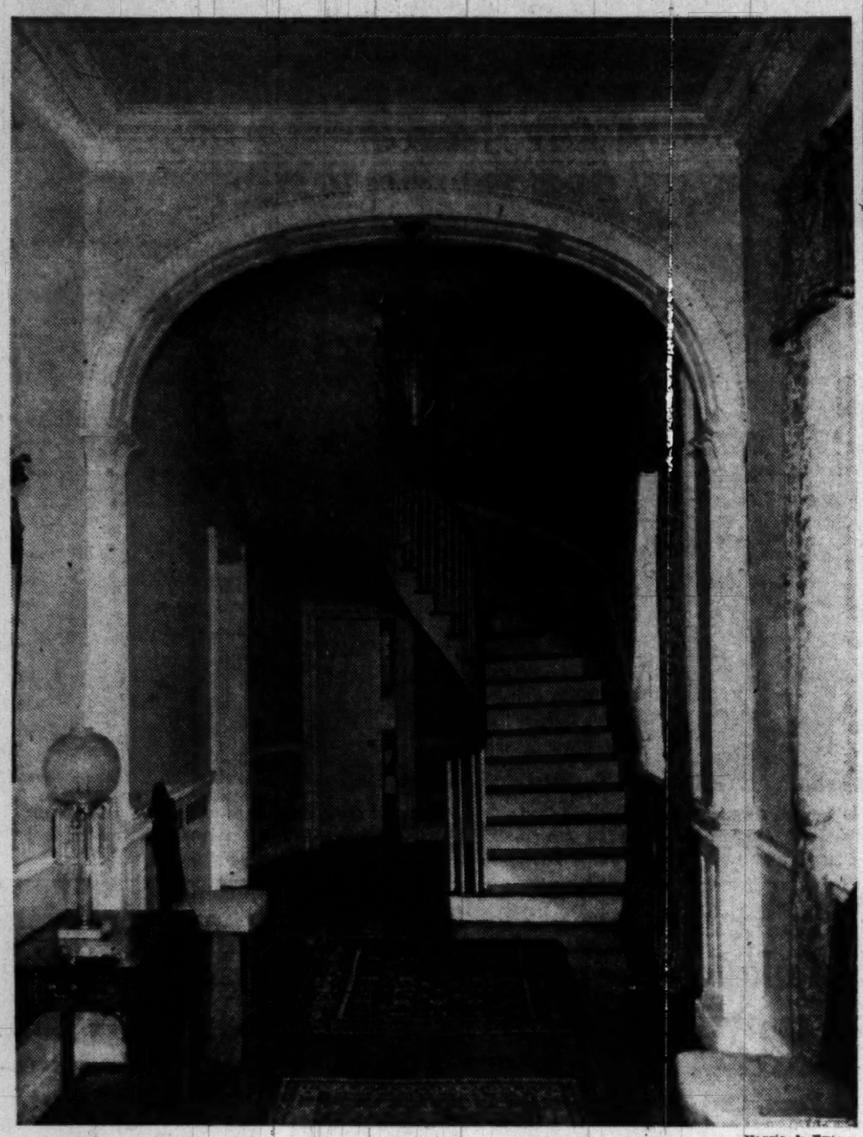
Sent Out Scouts To Buy Old Glass

"I HAD scouts all up and down the East looking for old glass," explains the connoisseur.

Another problem came when he discovered the patio in back of his house was made from comparatively new bricks. He located an ancient brick house as old as his that he could buy for $3000, and replaced the modern brick from his patio with the old ones from the house. Then he resold the little house for $3000 and made himself a Colonial brick patio.

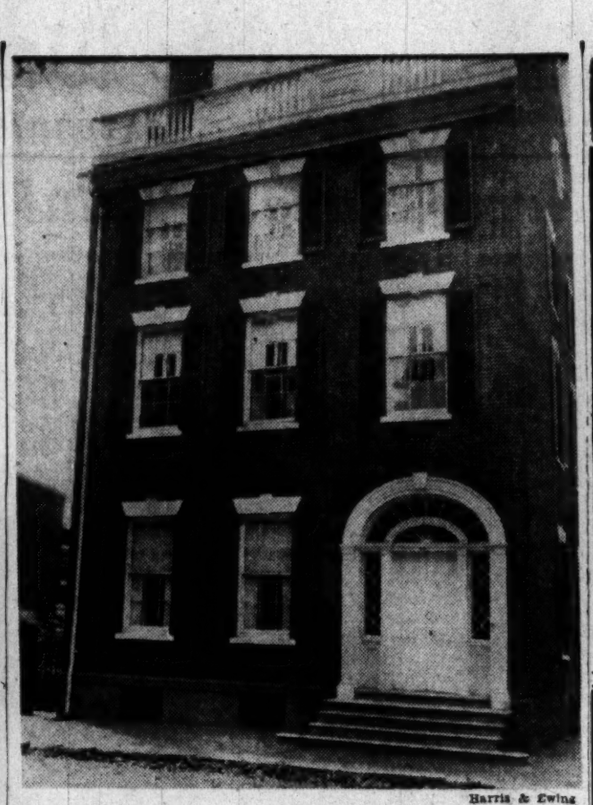
Before he could decide on the proper shade for his walls, Mr. Wallack went to Williamsburg to study Colonial color schemes. Everything was going to be perfect. And it is.

"I don't make much money," says the radio dealer who knows Colonial furniture-makers by the legs on their chairs. "But I spend it lavishly."



Harris & Ewing

AN OUTSTANDING feature of the Lafayette House in Alexandria is the graceful winding stairway. In the foreground are examples of the fine quality early American furnishings that the owner of the house, Nathan Wallack, has used throughout. Mr. Wallack recently was given an "award of merit" from the Alexandria Association for his "faithful" restoration of the House



Harris & Ewing

ONE of Alexandria's outstanding Colonial houses is the Lafayette House. The owner, Nathan N. Wallack, recently completed a painstaking restoration of the building, bringing its every feature in line with the period of the early 1800's, when it was built. Even the window glass, door bell, footscrapers are authentic to the style and period of the house

All in the Heart

The value of this life on earth . . . Depends upon the scales . . . Of whether one succeeds at last . . . Or ultimately fails . . . Not by the weight of money or . . . A single ounce of fame . . . Or such seclusion as would seem . . . A freedom from all blame . . . But by the comfort of a word . . . The kindness of a deed . . . And by the boundless charity . . . To somebody in need . . . The sacrifice of time and toil . . . To help the world survive . . . And keep ambition, faith and hope . . . And fortitude alive . . . And so as there is victory . . . Or every effort fails . . . The answer is the human heart . . . And how it tips the scales.

Pastor's Ancestors Were Headhunters

From headhunting to spreading christianity is quite a professional change for any family in two generations.

The second part of this advance was in town yesterday and he was a rather rare visitor even for Washington.

He is Pastor Sasa Rore, of Guadalcanal, here to attend the Seventh-day Adventist camp meeting in the Sligo Church, Carroll and Flower aves., Takoma Park.

Pastor Rore was wearing his "civilian" clothes, but he put on his ancestral gear to show reporters: a "lap-lap," which is a sort of sarong made of the bark of a tree; a shell around the neck, a sensational headpiece flowing with human hair, and in the hand an ax that decapitated—in the hands of others—seven persons in the headhunting days.

Pastor Rore is an expert on two subjects, among others: The lore of headhunting, which he remembers hearing about as a child and missionary work in the western Pacific.

Headhunting, he said, grew from requirements of "devil priests" that each person shed at least one man's blood. The technique, he said, was to hit a man right back of the ear—this being quite a vulnerable place—and knock him unconscious. Then off came his head.

The heads were preserved by removing the brains and drying the remainder in the sun.

About the ministry, Pastor Rore is a very modern circuit-rider. He explained he flies thousands of miles every year covering his huge parish in the Solomons and New Guinea. These have their own ministers but they are under his general supervision.

With the arrival of Christianity, headhunting disappeared in the Solomons, he said. The Seventh-day Adventists have established schools to teach the people better customs.

Pastor Rore made friends with many GIs during the Guadalcanal days of World War II. You can understand how—he is the most pleasant of men. During his visit to this country some of these GIs have heard about it and have traveled hundreds of miles to visit with him again. One presented him with a wrist watch.

Accompanying Pastor Rore was Elder W. E. Battye, of Sidney, Australia.

Pastor Rore and Elder Battye were main speakers at the camp meeting last night at the Sligo Church. Speaker today will be Elder C. L. Torry, treasurer of the General Conference; Elder N. F. Pease, pastor Loma Linda (Calif.) Adventist Church; Elder S. A. Saljavaara, missionery from Finland, and Elder L. R. Mansell, pastor of the Roanoke, Va., church.

District Priest To Lead Talks On Missions

Notre Dame, Ind., Aug. 18 (Spl.). A Washington, D. C. priest will discuss the future of Roman Catholic missionary work in the war-harrassed and Communist-controlled regions of China and Korea here next week.

The Rev. Frederick A. McGuire, C. M., executive secretary of the recently established Mission Secretariat in Washington, will introduce the subject in the keynote address before the fourteenth annual convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade to be held at the University of Notre Dame, August 24-27.

A veteran of China missions, Father McGuire was recalled to the United States early this year to assume charge of the Mission Secretariat. Purpose of the secretariat is to gather and disseminate information of value to the directors of mission-sending agencies in the United and the personnel in various mission fields.

The agenda of the CSMC convention will include adoption of resolutions on the Oriental missions, designed to forestall a loss of interest among Catholic Americans in the work of the church in those parts of Asia which have fallen under the domination of Communist regimes.

Teacher-Training Project Planned By Christ Church

Ligon, professor of psychology, and has been the basis of the church work at Christ Church since 1947.

Cars will leave the church at 8:30 a. m., August 26, for the all-day workshop at Sherwood Forest, Md. The following day, after an 8 a. m. prayer service at Christ Church, the workshop will continue at Linthicum Hall, 3116 O st. nw.

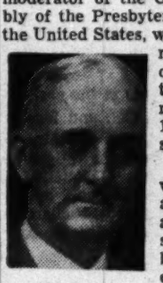
Dr. B. R. Lacy Guest Minister Here Sunday

The Rev. Benjamin R. Lacy, jr., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, will be the guest minister Sunday at the Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts. nw.



Dr. Lacy

Dr. Lacy, who will preach at both the 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. services, has been president of Union Theological Seminary in Virginia for 24 years. He was elected moderator of the Ninetieth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., by acclamation. This was the first time such action had been taken in 21 years, and the third time in the church history.

A native of Raleigh, N. C., Dr. Lacy received an A.B. degree from Davidson College in 1906, and as a Rhodes Scholar received an A.B. degree from Oxford University in 1910. His theological training was taken at Union Seminary, where he was awarded a B.D. degree in 1913.

Disagreement Revived Over Psalms Listing

The new twentieth-century version of the Book of Psalms published recently for Roman Catholic use has again stirred up an age-old question of the numbering of the psalms.

For instance the King James 23d (or Good Shepherd) Psalm roughly parallells that 22d of the Douay and new edition.

Why the difference in numbering?

Both stay together through the first eight psalms. The Catholic versions consider the ninth and tenth as one for the sake of unity. Those who say the two parts should be separate psalms point to the somewhat diverse subject matter, the prayer of the first being mainly against the enemies of Israel; those of the second, against the wicked within Israel.

However, it is pointed out, as in all alphabetic psalms, there is not much logical sequence between verses.

The different versions get together in numbering again after the 146th Douay and new version psalm. Here, again it is a matter for bibical experts to decide. However, both come out even in the end with 150 psalms.

For 27 years, he has been preaching in the Presbyterian Church of England, occupying influential pulpits and, for a time, serving as chaplain to Presbyterians in Oxford University, and as moderator of the Free Church Federal Council in Great Britain.

Conference To Hear Two D. C. Pastors

Massanetta Springs, Aug. 18 (Spl.).—Two Washington ministers will be among the 11 famous pastors of large metropolitan churches who will speak at the twenty-ninth annual Bible Conference opening here Monday.

They are the Rev. George M. Docherty, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. DeWitt L. Miller, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren.

The featured speakers represent six denominations and serve churches with from 2000 to 5000 members. Dr. Docherty's part of the two-week program runs August 26-29, while Dr. Miller will be special speaker on Church of the Brethren Day, August 26.

Others on the schedule include the Rev. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, who will be one of the speakers on the three closing days of the conference, September 1-3.

The Rev. Charles Ray Goff, pastor of the famous "skyscraper" church, the large Chicago Temple (Methodist), will speak on August 29-31. The Rev. Raymond I. Lindquist, pastor of the Old First Presbyterian Church, Orange, N. J., will be on the program August 22-24.

Others will be the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of the Calvary Episcopal Church, New York City, who is also known for his books and his radio ministry. He will open the conference Monday night, and will conclude his series of addresses on Wednesday.

The Rev. Harold L. Ockenga, pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church, Boston, credited with being one of the spearheads of "the greatest revival movement New England has seen in more than a century," will give four sermons August 23-24.

The pastors of two large Virginia churches, the Rev. Theodore F. Adams, First Baptist Church, Richmond, and the Rev. Robert A. Lapsley, First Presbyterian Church, Roanoke, will speak on August 29 and August 31.

Others will be the Rev. Lloyd Ellis Foster, pastor of the Old Presbyterian Church, Newark, N. J., August 30-31, and the Rev. J. Calvin Reid, pastor of the Mount Lebanon Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, August 21-27.

Former District Vicar to Return For 3 Sundays

The Rev. Francis Yarnall, formerly vicar of Epiphany Episcopal Chapel, 230 C st. sw., will conduct services at the Church of the Holy Comforter, St. Andrew's Parish, 701 Oglethorpe st. nw., for the next three Sundays.

Dr. Yarnall

The 80-year-old Vicar retired after a 47-year career in September, 1947. He had been associated with the Epiphany Chapel for 17 years.

A little, white-haired man, the clergyman was famous for his soft-voiced sermons, kind understanding and gentle humor. He came to Washington in 1930 after serving pastorates in Pennsylvania, Florida and Long Island churches.

White House Hopeful For Rail Settlement

By The Associated Press

The White House held out hope last night for a meeting today of railroad and uninon negotiators in threatened Nation-wide rail strike.

Even Ayers, assistant press secretary, said Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman may be able to get both sides back into a conference. A series of five-day "token" strikes is scheduled for next week, and Steelman was working against the clock to prevent further spread of walkouts.

Ayers said Steelman met with two representatives of the trainmen and conductors' unions for two hours and asked them to return before noon today. Ayers added:

"He may have representatives of the carriers to meet with the union representatives. He is trying to find a basis for getting the two groups together for further negotiations around the same table." Ayers would not elaborate on the prospects for this.

Union leaders said unrest among the workers had reached a "critical stage." Hundreds of them left their jobs in unauthorized walkouts in the New York harbor area.

John R. Steelman, presidential assistant, called leaders of the trainmen's and conductors unions into a conference on the wage dispute. He talked with railroad representatives last night.

Meanwhile, some 5000 International Harvester Co. workers struck in Chicago, but an Alabama steel strike that had idled 21,000 workers was settled.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors have called two five-day token strikes for next week. With no sign of a break in the deadlock, Steelman is working against time to prevent their spread.

Some 3000 workers are poised to strike at 6 a. m. Monday at three key terminals — Cleveland, St. Paul and Louisville, Ky. Another 5000 workers have been authorized to strike Tuesday on two strategic short line railroads—the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern, owned by U. S. Steel Corp., and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, controlled by the New York Central.

These strikes would slow the movement of steel, oil and coal in the Chicago and Pittsburgh industrial regions.

Federal Reserve Board Unit Ready to Act to Curb Credit

A powerful agency of the Federal Reserve Board, its Open Market Committee, yesterday served notice it was ready to take independent, strong action to curb credit.

After meetings of the committee and the Federal Reserve Board governors, the latter issued a statement announcing an increase in the Federal Reserve Bank's discount rate and—more important — a warning that private bank lending had become "clearly excessive."

The raise in the discount rate, from 1½ percent in New York to 1¾ percent, was more of a pyschological effect than a real one. The notice yesterday served mainly to underline the Reserve Board's intent.

That intent, it was unmistakable, is for the Open Market Committee to conduct its operations of buying and selling Treasury bonds in such a fashion as to restrict commercial banks' ability to lend money.

One result, if the committee acts as it proposes, will be an increase in the interest rate of Federal short-term obligations. This is something Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder has hitherto opposed, since it means added expense in financing the Government's debt.

The board's statement noted that a pay-as-you-go tax program to finance the Government's needs—it was clearly referring to the new armament program—was essential. But that, it noted, was not enough. To stop inflation, there must be "parallel and prompt restraint in the area of monetary and credit policy," the statement declared.

Informed sources said there was no doubt the board meant to apply that restraint, through its open market operations, whatever opposition it might encounter.

In a somewhat parallel anti-inflationary action, Secretary Snyder announced yesterday that insurance companies and savings banks and other "institutional" investors could buy up to $1,100,000 worth of Series E and G Government bonds. The previous limit was $100,000.

When commercial banks buy such bonds, they form a basis for the extension of loans and are inflationary to that extent. But if those bonds are absorbed by insurance companies and the like, they do not form the basis for the issuance of more credit.

Senate Group Cuts Road Aid $120 Million

The Senate Public Works Committee yesterday lopped $120 million off a $748,500,000 Federal aid highway bill in response to an Administration economy plea. A Senate fight was immediately launched to cut it more deeply.

The $120 million slash voted by the committee was precisely the cut recommended by the President, but the Senate unit didn't make the cuts where the President asked.

The District of Columbia highway program was slightly cut back by the reductions, but the three million dollars previously earmarked for the Baltimore-Washington parkway was not touched.

The District's 1952 share, which totaled $3,681,000 under the original bill, was reduced to $3,223,750, a cut of $457,250. Under the two-year authorization, the same amount would be available for the District in 1953.

In announcing the 120-million-dollar over-all reduction in Federal highway aid for the Nation in each of the two years, Public Works Chairman Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.), called it "merely a tightening up for economy purposes without policy change."

He said the "changed international situation brought about by the Korean war" and increased military expenditures influenced the cuts.

President Truman called for the pruning Thursday in a letter to the committee. He said the $748,500,000-a-year authorization originally voted by the committee was "inconsistent with defense spending needs."

Mr. Truman recommended that the Federal aid program be trimmed to the 500 million dollars he originally recommended.

The committee cut the bill's total to 628 million dollars, but Chavez said the items retained over 500 million dollars, were not actually part of the Federal aid program.

The strictly Federal aid funds voted must be matched by the States receiving the allotment, as well as the District.

Other Cuts Listed

In departing from the President's formula for making the cuts, the Senate committee wiped out a special 70 million dollar item for construction of interstate highways and reduced by only 25 million dollars the authorization for secondary or farm roads.

Mr. Truman had urged a sharper cutback in secondary road money and use of Federal aid funds primarily for interstate roads.

Other cuts voted by the committee slashed National Defense access roads 15 million dollars, Indian roads 4 million dollars, the Inter-American highway 2 million dollars, the Rama Road in Nicaragua 2 million and the Bureau of Public Roads emergency fund 2 million dollars.

Douglas Wants More Cuts

When the bill later was called up in the Senate, Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) served notice he will move to cut the total recommended by the committee approximately in half, to $310 million for each of the two years, 1952-53.

Noting that Congress appropriated only $385 million for Federal highway aid this year, Douglas termed it "absurd" to vote a 60 percent increase for roads during the Korean emergency.

Since Federal funds have to be matched, he claimed his amendment would save a billion and a quarter dollars over the two years to both the Federal Government and the States.

The Senate will vote on the bill and all amendments Tuesday.

Senators McKellar, Douglas Clash on Senate Floor

An angry clash between Senate veteran Kenneth McKeller (D., Tenn.) and Senate freshman Paul Douglas (D., Ill. marked Senate debate on the Federal highway bill yesterday.

Douglas and Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) were complaining to the Senate that the Southern and Southwestern states got more Federal highway funds for local roads at the expense of the rest of the country.

Suddenly McKellar, in the presiding officer's chair, cracked down. McKellar cited Rule 19, forbidding offensive remarks, then tried to strike the Douglas-Morse exchange from the record.

Rouglas had the remarks read back to the Senate and asked the Senators to judge whether the rules had been violated. The Senate voted to let Douglas resume his speech.

Douglas ha dthe remarks read ate for upholding "the right of a Senator to speak without being muzzled by a presiding officer, contrary to the rules of the Senate."

Nationwide Insurance Is Recommended

The Army and Navy Union, oldest national veterans' group, went on record here yesterday as favoring a Federal system of health insurance.

In another resolution, also adopted unanimously, the 1500 delegates to the sixty-second national encampment urged that full voting privileges be granted District residents.

The organization, meeting at the Hotel Washington, claim a membership of approximately 100,000 auxiliary.

"We are against socialized medicine," a spokesman asserted, "but we are for Mr. Truman's and Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing's health program."

In other resolutions, the union urged creation of a Federal welfare department with Cabinet status, called upon civilian defense leaders to use veterans in their organizations, recommended extension of World War II veterans' benefits to men in Korea, and assailed landlords who discriminate against veterans with large families.

Col. Joseph C. Stehlin, of Miami Beach, national commander, in a wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, said the Nation had won two world wars and lost the peace on each occasion. Fighting men should represent America at the peace table, he said.

The union will conclude its encampment of officers this morning.

Locked-In Tot Feasts in Store

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ROSE MARIE BALL, 4, locked in a Boston, Mass., super-market, waves from behind a plate glass window to a crowd that had collected during a two-hour wait for the store owner to appear with the keys. Meanwhile, making herself at home, Rose Marie ate bananas and threw the peelings on the floor, gorged herself on ice-cream, chewed grapes, drank orangeade and poured some into the empty cash register. Luckily the owner arrived when she got to the liquor supplies

Home-Bound Girl Graduates High in Class

Miss Jeanette V. Pinkus, 18, crippled since she was 2½ years old, graduated with honors last night from George Washington High School in Alexandria, Va.

Miss Pincus

Miss Pinkus, a victim of rheumatoid arthritis, spoke at the graduation ceremonies standing with the help of crutches.

In a calm and clear voice she told of the beginnings being made in home-bound education for children too sick or crippled to go to school.

Jeanette, who graduated after only four-and-a-half years of formal education, said, "the only difference between the home-bound student and others is physical. The mind of the home-bound student is just as good."

Jeanette's scholastic record proves her point.

She was feature writer for the school paper and has been named to the Quill and Palm National Honorary Scholastic Society and the Quill and Scroll National Honorary Journalistic Society.

Jeanette learned to use a typewriter by hitting the keys with a pencil. Her high school average over four years was above 90 percent.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pinkus, 420 S. Washington st., Alexandria.

Graduation ceremonies, held in the school auditorium, included speeches by Samuel Koffler, class president; Edgar G. Pruet, principal, and Theodore R. Sinclair, Assistant Superintendent of Schools. Invocation and benediction were delivered by the Rev. Benjamin A. Lynt. Thirty-four students were graduated.

Panic Buying Ending, D. C. Heads Told

Panic buying in the District has just about ended, the Commissioners' Food Conservation Committee announced yesterday.

Committee Chairman J. Thomas Kennedy said the "so-called shortage items" are reappearing at most stores. Only in one or two areas is sugar still short, he said. Sugar was the only item the committee ever considered in short supply here.

"Apparently the only thing gained by the hoarders," Kennedy said, "was the procurement of large stocks of unneeded supplies. The hoarders might now purchase hammers to crush the sugar when it begins to harden."

Kennedy said the committee will continue its campaign against panic buying through posters and other publicity methods.

The District Commissioners created the committee last month to advise them on how to stop the panic buying that developed when fighting broke out in Korea.

Carolina Alerted For Hurricane; Aid Sent Burning Ship

Miami, Fla., Aug. 18 (AP).—Three rescue ships steamed tonight to the aid of a 7247-ton freighter which caught fire while battling winds and seas of a hurricane off Florida's east coast.

A rescue plane spotted the wallowing steamship Russell R. Jones late today about 440 miles east and slightly north of Melbourne, Fla. The Coast Guard plane gave no information about the fire which broke out early today.

While the drama of the sea developed, the hurricane moved steadily north-northwestward at its eight to ten mile pace and at 4:45 p. m. was centered about 320 miles east of Titusville. The North Carolina coastal area was advised to stand by on the alert. Florida was declared out of danger.

French Jewel Thefts Mount

Paris, Aug. 18 (AP).—Jewels worth more than $100,000 were reported missing today in the rash of burglaries in Paris and on the Riviera. The two losses registered today bring this month's total to $220,000.

One of the first thefts reported included Elsa Schiaparelli's two-million-franc "Big Dipper" brooch. It was in connection with this robbery that police prevented the fashion designer from boarding a plane for Tunis and questioned her for six hours Tuesday. Today she went to Grasse to tell authorities about the case.

Police sought $42,000 in rings, bracelets, diamonds and necklaces taken yesterday from the home of Radio Singer Lyne Clevers in suburban Neuilly. A neighbor saw a blond young man carrying a sack who had broken a window.

Jeweler Gaston Ben Simon returned to his apartment on Avenue du President Wilson to find burglars had made off with $63,000 in jewels and 800,000 francs. They had climbed a gutter-pipe, jimmied open a shutter and cut out a window-pane. They also visited the apartment next door, but its owner is away and there is no estimate of his loss.

Keepsakes of the late Premier Andre Tardieu were reported stolen from his step-daughter, Mrs. Serge Val, in Menton, on the Riviera.

Temperance Board Hails 'Cleanest' Ball Park

The Tempo's Terrific

Hit Parade's on TV, Still Loud and Fast

—By John Crosby—

I CAN think of no less likely candidate for television programming than the Hit Parade, one of radio's long-playing engagements. But the conversion to sight has been made about as well as could be expected, considering the self-imposed limitations under which the Hit Parade has always operated.

Crosby

The television Hit Parade (NBC-TV 10:30 p. m. Saturday) is an entirely separate operation from the radio Hit Parade (NBC 9 p. m. Saturday.) Tonight is the last television show for the summer, but the Hit Parade will be back in October. The TV job is a great big production number with singers, a chorus, ballet girls and tons of scenery. Naturally the top ten tunes have a terrible time competing with all those pretty bare legs, but they don't give up easily.

As I suppose everyone now knows, any melody played on the Hit Parade has an insistence, a brassy clamor, impossible to ignore even when a whole line of pretties are kicking their legs at you. That part of the Hit Parade hasn't changed much. The noise is still terrific.

The late George Washington Hill clung to the very end to the notion that every man in a 40-piece orchestra should earn his living at all times, that a fiddle lying idle in a musician's lap was a waste of the American Tobacco Company's money. With only brief respites here and there, this philosophy is still adhered to.

SOME of the production numbers will remind you strongly of a Shubert musical of the '20s. Last week's production of "Tzena, Tzena, Tzena," for example, looked as if it came straight out of "The Student Prince," easily one of the most astonishing switches of our time. "Tzena" was originally a favorite of the Israeli army. The Hit Parade lightheartedly switched the locale to a place that looked suspiciously like Heidelburg.

This one ended with three young men all down on one knee. Their other respective knees were occupied by three pretty girls who had an arm apiece around the boys' necks, the other one arched over their heads. They were all smiling prettily, straight at you and me. I've seen that finale somewhere before.

Signs of Exhaustion

IT'S GOING to be no easy task for producers to dream up a new setting to encase the songs once a week.

Signs of exhaustion are already evident. Last week, a boy-and-girl team caroled a song called "Hoop De Doo" in a Coney Island photo gallery for reasons which elude me to this day. One baritone sang "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered" to a couple of mannequins in a department store window and another singer crooned "Mona Lisa" at the figurehead on a ship. All these numbers suggest somebody is at his wit's end. If a song ever stayed on the Hit Parade for 6 months, I imagine the producers would all be asylum cases.

In spite of its essential conservatism, the Hit Parade is a gay and exuberant show and quite a lot of fun to watch. One of its pleasanter aspects is the fact there are no comedians telling jokes.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Otherwise He May Have To Consult One

Speak softly to your little child . . . And keep him cool and kissed . . . Some day perhaps he'll grow to be . . . A psychoanalyst.

Mary Ellen

HORN ON THE PLAY

Mrs. Cecile S. Holly of 4605 Warren st. nw. tells a wonderful story that grew out of her mother's cataract operation.

When it was all over, a mask was put over the patient's face and the room darkened. Pop came to call that evening and walked in unannounced.

"How do you feel?" he asked.

"Hello," came the hesitant response.

He stooped over and gave the patient a morale-building kiss.

"Your teeth are bothering you, aren't they?" he said, and started to take them out for her. The nurse who walked in at that moment gasped:

"I'm afraid you're in the wrong room, sir. That's not your wife."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

A great deal of curb space on Capitol Hill is reserved for the cars of secretaries of Senators. I work for the Government, too, and I dare say my job is more important than that of a Senator's secretary. But nobody provides any parking facilities for me.

Can you tell me why this rank discrimination is necessary?

Name Withheld

Dear Sir:

Washington is the seat of our National Government. Many of the people who work here are entitled to special privileges because of the offices they hold. For example, we would hardly expect the President to travel about town in a taxi, or on a streetcar.

Just who deserves which special privileges is a complex matter on which it would probably be hard to get general agreement.

Somebody has to make the decisions, and so long as Congress runs Washington, Congress will make them. If you don't agree at times, console yourself with the thought that other Americans often disagree with the rules made for them by their mayors and councilmen.

The only difference is that our cousins in the States can express their disagreement at the polls.

Bill

WHAT'S MORE, THE CLERKS ARE VERY OBLIGING

A recent item here dealt with curtailment of mail service resulting from Congressional economy moves. C. B. Riddle suggests that a more constructive approach would be to tell District Liners about those Post Office services which are still available. For example, at the Ben Franklin station.

On the new schedule, the Ben Franklin postoffice is open only from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays and until noon on Saturday.

But the box section is always open. Stamps are sold (by machine, but at face value) and a Mailomat is also available. What's more, first-class matter may be mailed there, with 11 pickups of ordinary mail during the "closed" hours and 14 pickups of airmail, which goes directly out to National Airport.

If you're stuck with a small package, the clerk in the box section will weigh it for you. You can buy your stamps from the machine and drop the package in any mail box designed to receive it.

"THE BEST LAID PLANS"

Here is a sequel to our story about the United Press reporter who tried to scoop the opposition on a dead phone.

When James Russell Wiggins was Washington correspondent for a St. Paul paper, he got wind of an upcoming Government action that would surely make big headlines in his home town.

Russ rounded up his facts, pounded out a story, and then punched it out on the tape of the teletype in his office. Carefully locking the punched tape in the top drawer of his desk, he sat back to let nature take its course.

Sure enough, in a couple of days he got the flash he was waiting for. The story he had prepared was accurate in every detail.

Removing the tape from his desk, he began feeding it into the teletype, gloating at the thought that his paper would have a complete, well-rounded story in the same time it would take the opposition to get a bare bulletin.

But hardly a paragraph of the story had moved before St. Paul broke the circuit to laboriously tap out this message in return:

"This machine out of paper. Send your story by Western Union."

Wiggins looked at the cryptic symbols in which the perforated tape was coded, and groaned. He had thrown away the original copy of the story, and had to start from scratch.

Fay Gets Rough Grilling on Hill

By Tom McNamara and Jack Anderson

(While Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation, his column will be written by members of his staff.)

It's usually the district attorney who rips into the witness, but this role was reversed the other day for Washington's District Attorney George Morris Fay. He got a rough 30-minute grilling at a closed-door meeting of the Senate "wire-tap" investigating committee.

Fay

At one point West Virginia's Senator Matt Neely asserted that Fay was "under suspicion as much as Lieut. Joe Shimon," the police officer who tapped Howard Hughes' telephone in 1947.

Neely was outraged by a statement that Fay had given to the press, claiming the grand jury's investigation of wire-tapping "was not a whitewash." Fay also had expressed the opinion the Government could never make a case against Shimon "or anyone else."

"What motive could you have for throwing cold water on the investigation the Senate is making here?" demanded the West Virginia senator.

"I had no intention of throwing any water on the investigation," stammered Fay.

"You could not help knowing that the effect of your statement was to discredit the investigation here," snorted Neely.

The uncomfortable D.A. admitted writing a letter of commendation on October 7, 1947, praising Shimon for services of "inestimable value" to the District of Columbia. At that time, Shimon was attached to Fay's office and they became good friends. Yet Fay's office was largely responsible for prosecuting Shimon before the grand jury.

Daily Talks

Though Fay didn't handle the wire-tapping case himself, he admitted to the senators that he had consulted "every day" with his assistants and that they actually advised the grand jury they "could not see where there had been divulgence." Under the law, the grand jury couldn't indict anyone for wire-tapping unless the overheard conversations were divulged.

"Do you think Lieutenant Shimon would have tapped these wires, employed all these men to assist him and use this equipment without disclosing what he had overheard?" demanded Florida's Senator Claude Pepper.

"I think it was obvious that there are chances Shimon did divulge, but on the point of criminal indictment, we have to prove beyond reasonable doubt," explained Fay.

But it was Neely who gave the district attorney the most scorching tongue-lashing.

"I think," Neely bristled, "that instead of your helping this committee to carry out its lawful function, I think you have greatly prejudiced this case.

"A man who will invade the rights of people by setting up wire-tapping devices and obtaining information about conversations that are none of his business, a man of that kind ought to be in jail," the West Virginian stormed.

"Anybody who aids or abets that sort of thing," he added, "ought to be behind bars . . . Before this investigation is done with, you will find out that we are going to have all the evidence in this case. With the exception of murder and treason, wire-tapping is the lowest form of outrage upon the American people."

Ups-and-Downs

Such was the confusion in a recent closed-door meeting of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on the question of controlling cotton prices that members literally didn't know up from down.

Here's how the transcript of the hush-hush session reads in part (with Ralph S. Trigg, the Agriculture Department's production and marketing chief, testifying):

Trigg—"Perhaps it would help if I refer to it (the price of cotton) as a minimum ceiling and not a floor. It is a price we cannot go below."

Senator Bricker of Ohio—"But it is not a floor on the prices at all."

Senator Flanders of Vermont—"It is the floor of a ceiling."

Trigg—"Yes, sir."

Senator Flanders—"And not the floor?"

Trigg—"That is correct."

Flanders—"That is all I need to know."

Senator Fulbright of Arkansas—"But that is not what he said a moment ago."

Senator Burnet Maybank of South Carolina, the committee chairman—"Well, I do not know what he said a moment ago, but that is what it is."

Localized War

Presidential advisers say Truman is convinced that the Korean war is "localized"—in other words, Russia won't provoke an insurrection on any other front and risk an all-out war with the United States.

That is why he is insisting on only "stand-by" economic controls for the time being.
